The Coat-of-Arms (Crandall)
(National Research Society, Washington, D.C.)

Burk's "General Armory" and "Encyclopedia of Heraldry" does not list any Armorial Coat for the Crandall or Crandell Families. Since Crandall and Crandell are modifications of the Welsh name, CRAN, it is believed that those bearing the surnames Crandall and Crandell can lay claim to the Cran Coat of Arms. Riestap, in his "Armorial General," describes the Cran family Coat of Arms as follows:

ARMORIAL COAT:

Per fess; in top half or a crane argent; in bottom half argent the letter X sable.

EXPLANATION AND DESCRIPTION OF THE SYMBOLS AND COLORINGS OF THE ABOVE ARMORIAL COAT:

OR yellow or gold, denotes generosity and elevation of mind.

ARGENT white or silver, signifies peace and sincerity.

SABLE or black, denotes constancy and sometimes, but most rarely, grief.

THE CRANE or STORK is the emblem of Filial duty, and is also the emblem of a grateful man.

THE FAMILY CREST: (Belonging to the above Armorial Coat). A crane issuant. (No motto is given on the Cran Coat.)

Since the name Crandall is taken from the words "Crane Dale, a low lying section near the Welsh border inhabited by Cranes, it is reasonable to assume the significance of the Cranes in the Coat of Arms.

Col. A. Julian Crandall called on the writer in Florida and loaned him the Crandall Coat saying that he had investigated and had come to the conclusion that the coat was intended for the Crandall family and had several copies made for members of his family.

A portion of the original home of Eld. John Crandall built about 1665 on his homestead near Westerly, R. I. The place has always remained in the Crandall name to the present day. This picture was furnished by the present owner Dr. Harry Franklin Crandall of Westerly, R. I. who appears as a boy of 12. in the picture. Others are Mrs. Margaret (Gavit) Crandall, his grandmother in the center and their Indian maid.

The compiler dedicates this book to Professor Albert Rogers Crandal (#2622. P-477), of N. Y., and Milton, Wisconsin, in recognition of the fine work he did in gathering and compiling records, most of which are included, thanks to his daughter, Alberta Crandall.

Honored Gentlemen,

Yours bearing date Nov. 18, last past we received, wherein you were pleased to signify unto us that you have been often solicited to hear several complaints made against us by the inhabitants of Stonington, and also of other gentlemen, and that you have reason to grant them a time of hearing and did give us timely notice of, and notice to, appear. Unto the which we cannot omit but make you some return as to that of complaint made by the inhabitants of Stonington: we do profess that we are not sensible that we are in any measure guilty — which, if we were, we hope we should have prevented their complaints by rendering satisfaction. But we are very sensible of great wrongs that we have sustained by them for several years. And as to a time of hearing and giving timely notice, we, being by charter and otherwise obligated to our other colony, could not offend but with the hazard of breaking our obligations. It, notwithstanding, we are much inclined to a peaceable and a final issue of those differences by a legal process in Law in the jurisdiction whereunto we do belong, and by whose authority we are here settled where we doubt not but equal justice will be rendered. As for your doubt to agree with those our neighbors of Stonington and the other gentlemen, we hope that your colony and ours, will, in the first place, lovingly agree; and then we question not but there will be an agreement between us and our neighbors of Stonington and the rest of the gentlemen.

Signed — John Crandall

Tobias Saunders.

In Behalf of the Town.

P.S. 11th. of March, 1669.

Honored Govenor, we do believe and entreat you to signify by this Injun (Indian) that you have received this letter, then we shall know whether he have done faithfully.

For the Worshipful John Winthrop Esquire, Govenor of Connecticut, to be communicated to the assistant there.

N.B. March 11, 1669. Mr. Crandall's letter to the Govenor.

(Transcribed by Frederick Main Treglown, nephew of the author, born and educated in England.)

INTRODUCTION

Sooner or later most people become curious to know who they really are and from whence they came. He who calls, seekers after such knowledge, crazy, is but revealing his own lackadaisical attitude to matters of far reaching importance.

Dr. Henry Bond, in his historical family publication, contends that among all people, enlightened and otherwise, through all periods of history, the desire to trace a lineage and to perpetuate its remembrance is an instinct of human nature and an innate principal implanted for wise and honest purposes.

Something like a quarter of a century ago I received a letter from one Howard S. Crandall of Westerly, F.I., asking for data relating to my father's immediate family. For many years, without satisfaction, I had entertained a growing desire to know something about my ancestors. At last I was to be rewarded. Correspondence convinced me that Howard had the desired facts.

I made a trip to Westerly and there sat at the feet of a man--perfectly sane--who for thirty years had been spending his money and much of his time in searching records, on two continents, for ancestral data. He showed me his files and said; "I have here the equivalent of fifteen volumes of material". He also stated that he had traced the ancestral line back to the 4th century. Here was the making of a great book on Crandall genealogy. A few months later my newly found friend and cousin died of cancer. Most unfortunately his vast collection was wilfully burned by a member of the family who stated that he feared the spread of cancer bacteria. Had medical advice been obtained all could have been saved.

A veritable galaxy of other members of the far reaching clan have taken it upon themselves to "spend and be spent" in this bewitching field. We mention only a few of the scores of names that should appear here. Probably Elwin Gerry Davis of North Providence, P.I. should head the list of devotees to this task. Thomas Eugene Crandall of Santa Cruz, Cal. stricken early in life with tuberculosis, gathered much valuable data in England. Prof. Albert Rogers Crandall of Alfred, N.Y. and Milton, Wisc., gave forty years to gathering materials for an unpublished book. Bruce Verne Crandall of Three Lakes, Wisc., directed his ready pen to the cause. The list continues with Frederick A. Crandall of Westertown, N.Y. Arovestus P. Crandall of Palmyra, N.Y., Washington I. Crandall Chattanooga, Tenn., Edward Robert Crandall Coldwater, Mich., George B. Benedict, Norwich, N.Y., Mrs. Blanche (Crandall) Tattersall American Fork, Utah, Mrs. Donna (Chilton) Manrodt, Newark, N.J., Rollin S. Polk, Troy, N.Y., Mrs. Rena (Keith) Clisby, Portland, Ore., Mrs. Meinard A. (Virginia Baines) Schur, San Diego, Calif., Rev. Dr. William S. Crandall, Binghamton, N.Y., Raymond Fowler Crandall Hood, Wesleyville, Pa., Col. A. Julian Crandall, Ashaway, R.I., Rev. Paul E. Crandall, Norfolk, Va., Mrs. M. L. Small, Turner, Ore., Mrs. Ina O. Ferrin, Palo Alto, Cal., Mrs. Linton B. Crandall, Mansfield, Conn. Dr. Clifford W. Crandall, Gainesville, Florida., Frederick T. Carpenter, Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Prof. William L. Avery Jr. Frewster, N.Y., Mrs. Nathaniel (Hunter) Perkins, Albany, N.Y., Orra Stillman Rogers and Mrs. Elma (Burdick) Hubbard Rogers, Plainfield, N.J., Mrs. Nellie (Willard) Johnson, Norwich, N.Y., Devere Allen, Wilton, Conn., George B. Utter, Westerly, R.I., Lucius A. Crandall (Long), Hillsboro, Ore., Mrs. James V. (Nellie Crandall) Mead, Dryden, N.Y., Ben R. Crandall, Alfred, N.Y., Dr. Harry F. Crandall, Westerly, R.I., Howland F. Atwood, Hartland Four Corners, Vt., William G. Crandall, Homer, N.Y., The business of putting the big job across fell upon the shoulders of John Cortland Crandall, of New Woodstock, N.Y. No one, not even the compiler, himself, knows how he has managed to find the time and strength, to say naught of funds, to engage this Herculean undertaking over a period of many years. Kinsfolk, whose numbers are legion, of this and future generations, as they peruse this book, will be under lifelong obligations to John Cortland Crandall.

Howard Crandall affirmed that more than five thousand descendants of Elder John Crandall had become ministers. Records of precinct, state and nation disclose the names of Crandalls who have gained places of note in education, science, invention, law, medicine, industry, business and various other fields. However, the rank and file have been humble, middle class folks. For the most part they have been known for their sturdiness of character, noble principals, good citizenship, and consistent religious devotion.

Bruce Verne Crandall wrote a treatise in which he featured the claim that the one outstanding trait of the Crandall family was--"Independent thinking", oft times developing into obstinacy, tho' accompanied by open-mindedness, conscientiousness, liberality and purposefulness." If all that has been written about Elder John Crandall is true then most of the hundreds of thousands, emanating from this progenitor, must naturally possess those characteristics which exemplify the best in American life. To wit: Independence of thought and action, democracy of the first water and unadulterated religion.

It is probable that the humble unassuming Elder John played a role comparable with, if not greater than, that played by Roger Williams, or any other man, in hewing out the original timbers for our American constitutional foundation. See appendix 11.

The writer of this introduction realizes that much which could be written here will appear more properly under the appendices. He has therefore consigned various items of secondary importance to said pages. Many paragraphs, which lack of space compels us to omit, should be incorporated. This is cause for much regret.

We rejoice with every reader of this book, that now, after many decades of years, the dream of a multitude has become a reality.

WILLIAM S. CRANDALL, D.D.

THE COMPILER'S APOLOGY

Long have I dreaded the time when I would be called upon, to put into words, some account of my own activities in connection with this gigantic undertaking, while I have kept a constant virgil for someone to show up who would do this for me, yet knowing full well that not a person exists who could relieve me of this task, resigned, I will endeavor in a brief and feeble manner to extricate myself.

I am inviting you to take a walk with me down through the beautiful Green Mountains of Vermont to a buisy little town, through which runs the Black River, hemmed in on all sides by mountains-called Springfield- It was here that the writer conceived the thought of tackling the job of compiling the Crandell genealogy. Prompted by a letter from Elwin Gerry Davis, compiler of Crandall records, of North Providence, R.I. who had received the account of the birth of my second daughter in 1906. In this letter Mr. Davis said that if I would send him all of the records of my family as far back as possible, he would in turn send me my direct line connecting me with the immigrant ancestor, Eld. John Crandell.

Upon receiving this data, I became more interested and started out to gathwr the records of my own line first. This was no easy task as my grand father had a family of fifteen children and likewise his father had a similar number. I started out by asking my father, the late Lester A. Crandall of Canton, N.Y. the name of his grand father to this he replied " I dont know as I ever had one", but I said, certainly some of your large family must have mentioned his name, and added, " would you know his name if you heard it"? To this he replied " I might", then I said was it ELIAS ?, to this he sn aped back. "yes sir, that was his name, Elias". It was here that he gave me some good advise when he remarked, " dont bother your head with such nonsense and foolishness, for if you ever live long enough to see your work completed, all you will get is kicks and plenty of them" . I regret to say that I had to live to be an old man myself to realize how much more he knew about genealogy than I did, although he did not even know the name of his own grand father. So you see I have been forewarned and now ready for my reward.

I mailed out forty-eight letters, asking for family data, to addresses in Chicago and vicinity, from these I received only one answer and one returned. This same condition has resulted for a good many years. If only one-quarter had answered my letters we could have nearly a complete record of the Crandalls. I expect when the book is finished and in circulation some of those who did not take the time to reply to my many requests, will be among the first to register complaints, to these I can only say its just too bad. To those who could heve given assistance that I was sure about, I have writte as many as five letters requesting their family records but with no reply. I have exhausted every means at my command to arrouse the interest of our kinsmen and, to this end, I have no regrets.

Along with these discouraging moments, I am not forgetful of the fine letters of encouragement from hundreds of our loyel relatives without which I would heve given up the attempt long ago. I wish spece would permit to reproduce some of these friendly letters of encouragement which inspired me to continue the task, for without these we would heve no genealogy of the Crandell family.

As in all genealogies and for that matter many vital statistics, contain conflicting dates and records, gravestone and Bible records often disagree, so why should one expect this genealogy to be an exception to the general rule. The compiler has had only the best of intentions to bring forth and reproduce, what he has found to be as nearly correct as the information would warrant, If errors appear, and this is a certainty, PLEASE try to find a reasonable excuse, considering the years he has spent untiringly at this gigantic task with only the thought in mind to perpetuate and preserve our family records, to enable you to find what is recorded of your family.

It is regrettable that the compiler, with the advice of Rev. William S. Crandall, turned the record over to Rev. Oscar Frank Stetson for copying and indexing, a job which he stated would consume about four months, it was understood that the system I had employed was not to be changed also the first few pages were to be submitted for my approval, this was not done and it was not until I had returned from Florida and made a trip to Pittsfield did I discover he had changed every single point in my system and not for the better. at first I intended taking the records home and starting all over again, but already it had cost considerable and a lot of time lost, he insisted the work was going on better and making good headway so I decided to leave them. Another year passed, and I made another trip, this time to Berlin, N.Y. only to find the records were not one-quarter completed, one of the main reasons was because he insisted in changing the system, leaving out the direct line, the generations and changing the dates to read Day, Month and year, in the process of changing the records as I had them, many unnecessary errors and omissions were made, some whole families were omitted, this will be noted in the book where I have tried to include them and had to use fractions to assist in tracing.

After my trip to Berlin, I was greatly disappointed with the progress being made and told Mr. Stetson that I would be down the 4th of Aug. and to have everything ready for me to take home, when I arrived I was told that Mr. Stetson had been taken to the hospital in Pittsfield, where I drove to see him, he arranged with a doctor to accompany me to the parsonage where I was given all of the records. Rev. Stetson passed away the following week.

Had the records been typed exactly as I had compiled the master-copy about two years and innumerable mistakes could have been saved.

All pages bearing the letter "c" in the lower right hand corner were typed by the compiler himself.

John C. Crandall.

THE BRIDGE BUILDER

An old man, traveling a lone highway,
Came at the evening cold and gray
 To a chasm deep and wide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
For the sullen stream held no fears for him;
 But he turned when he reached the other side,
 And builded a bridge to span the tide.
" Old Man"; Cried a fellow pilgrim near
You are wasting your strength with building here;
Your journey will end with the ending day,
And you never again will pass this way.
You have crossed the chasm deep and wide,
 Why build you a bridge at eventide?
And the builder raised his old gray head:
"Good friend, on the path I have come," he said,
There followeth after me today
A youth whose feet will pass this way;
This stream, which has been as naught to me,
To that fair-haired boy may a pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim.
Good Friend, I am building this bridge for him.

"Of all the affections of man, those which connect him with Ancestry are among the most natural and generous. They enlarge the sphere of his interests, multiply his motives to virtue and give intensity to his sense of duty to generations to come, by the perception of obligations to those which are past."
----- Quincy.

He only deserves to be remembered by posterity,
Who treasures up and preserves the history of his ancestors.

To trace ancestry, first find the required name in the index, turn to the page which is indicated in the index, the name and number of the parent will be found on the head line of the family. His No. will be found in the margin towards the front of the book, now the same process can be used to find the grand father, great grand father Etc.

The Crandall women are given a number if they have a family, in which case their children are indicated by- A.B.C. Etc. their Gr.Children by -a.b.c. Etc. their Gt.Grand Children by 1,2,3, Etc. Gt.Gt.Gr children by- i,ii,iii, Etc. In the records copied by Mr.Stetson this rule will not apply as he trumped up some system of his own, had not so much time and money been spent on his copy I would have copied them all over again. to have them uniform as in my master-copy.

The Crandall men are given a number if they have a family, the number in the margin indicates they are continued in the next generation.

A surname in parenthesis indicates the original name or maiden name. For example- Frances Grace (Towner)Crandall, indicates her maiden name was Towner.

Dear Mr Crandall:

I felt that I had to express to you; not only for myself; but for all the Crandalls both present and past, the deep appreciation and debt of gratitude that we all owe you for the wonderful work that you are doing.

I can realize in a small way, the endless hours of work and research, not to mention the money, that has been expended by you over these many years, in compiling the Crandall Family history.

One has to have a little experience in research to realize the labor that is involved and the many branches that have to be traced and proved. You have indeed dedicated your life to this work.

I feel that it has been a labor of love with you and when your book is completed you have certainly left for all future Crandalls, something that could never be bought-their heritage. You will have the gratitude of the generations to come, and may it in a small way compensate you for all that you have given.

Most sincerely, and gratefully,
Virginia Baines Schur.

Appendix 1.

Crandall Etymology.

The Crandall name seems to have a number of meanings, the first and most probable is said to come from Crane Dale, meaning a lake or swampy section where Cranes congregate, hence the Cranes on the coat-of-arms (the compiler's version). It is said that at one time the name was spelled Crann Dell, which meant Iron Dell. It is further claimed that the meaning is as follows: Crans, equals woods, Dal, equals vale or dale.

The name has several spellings to wit: Crandal, Crandale, Crandall, Crandel, Crandell, Crandle and Crandol.

Thomas Eugene Crandall, son of Fred Warren, a good authority on sources, of Santa Cruz, Calif. states, quote; "all present day bearers of the surname Crandall in its uncorrupted form, or variants, formed with the prefix Cran but terminating Dell, Dle or Dal, are believed to be descendants of Elder John Crandall, the Rhode Island founder the only English born Crandall known to have perpetuated his name and blood to this day."

NOTE: The compiler differs widely from the above statement of Thomas Eugene Crandall, first that he was born Welch instead of English, second the name Cran according to Burke's "General Armory" and "Encyclopedia of Heraldry" is distinctly a Welsh name and that Crandall is a modification of the name Cran.

Our authority further adds that, "The Crandall family is distinctly Anglo-Saxon in origin and name. The earliest known bearers of the name lived in a seacoast section of Monmouthshire, England, near the north shore of the English Channel, close to the Welsh border". Because of the border location of Monmouthshire and because of certain administrative contacts, it was frequently included with Wales. In as much as there were more Welsh than English in the country, it came to be understood that the Crandall family was Welsh. Thomas Eugene in his exhaustive research and writings explodes the Welsh origin theory and concludes his thesis with the succeeding reference: "Mr. Ernest Weekley, a celebrated English Etymologist, in a letter to the author regarding the disputed origin and history of the surname Crandall, stated: "I agree with you that the Welsh etymology is unlikely. It was probably suggested by the proximity of Chepstow--the vicinity where Crandalls are known to have lived --in Wales. "

NOTE;- Our good cousin Thomas Eugene (now deceased) seems to have favored the theory that the Crandalls were English and to this end has offered some weak arguments, however according to his "celebrated english etymologist" Mr. Weekley, in his last statement, That, " It was probably suggested by the proximity of Chipstow the vicinity where Crandalls are known to have lived in Wales" to me is positive proof that the Crandalls were Welchmen and not Englishmen.

Appendix 11.

The Rnoda Island Charter.

From the writings of Bruce Verne Crandall of Three Lakes, Wisc., who was exceptionally well versed in Baptist history, we have taken the following, "I am quoting from a lecture by Rev. Walter E. Tanner, D.D., pastor of a Baptist Church in Springfield, Mo. Dr. Tanner's lecture was on Baptist History and any reference which he made to John Crandall was only incidental to his main theme. As he gave the sources of his information, even down to volumes and page numbers, I regard what he gives as undoubted accuracy.

He said, that, "John Clarke, John Crandall, Obediah Holmes and Roger Williams went to England in the year 1663, and obtained from King Charles the second, a charter, which secured the Colony of Rhode Island as a free State, where there was a guarantee, forever, from the King and all his successors, that all the inhabitants of Rhode Island Colony should be given political and Religious Freedom, no matter what country they came from. NOTE: This original charter can be found in the Rhode Island Historical Library. This data also can be verified by and through Callander's History of Rhode Island, and from Colonial Records, found at Newport. The charter was signed July 8, 1663.

"The colonies of Rhode Island and Pennsylvania-- The one founded by the Baptists and the other by the Quakers--were the only two colonies that guaranteed absolute liberty. And it was the Constitution of the Colonies, especially the one in Rhode Island, and its democratic manner of handling public affairs, that is declared by Thomas Jefferson to be the leven of Liberty and Democracy of the American Constitution. (see Memoirs of Thomas Jefferson). "

"It is interesting on this account, that with the growth of Democracy came the struggle for Liberty and Independence in the Revolutionary War, and that the Colony of Rhode Island and the men who started it, namely: Obediah Holmes, John Clark, John Crandall and Roger Williams should really be looked upon as the first pioneers of Religious and Political Freedom in America".

WESTERLY (PAWCATUCK VILLAGE).

It would be difficult to round out the Crandall story into completion without a specific reference to the Town of Westerly.

Great will be the thrill and satisfaction coming to a Crandall offspring who may be privileged to visit Westerly and vicinity. In addition to spending plenty of time in this charming spot, contacting its churches, its unusual library, meeting distant cousins and imbibing the atmosphere of this historic New England village, one should go out to the old Homstead, see the ancient house, go to the site of the original orchard and stand near the twenty-seven pioneer graves with their primitive stone markers, Westerly belongs to us.

In a very readable and informative Rhode Island Tercentenary volume, bearing the caption, "The Town That Saved a State--Westerly", we find that Mary A. Best, the author, features John Crandall as playing no small part in those decisive days.

Westerly was the frontier town of the colony. With Massachusetts and Connecticut laying claim to the land as their own, and repeatedly doing their utmost to possess the same, The course of history was to be c directly determined by the attitude of a few brave, God-fearing zealots of the settlement.

We quote Miss Best: "In 1669 when Westerly was incorporated thirty families were scattered over the ten-by twenty mile tract."

"Relying on the charter(see appendix 11) the settlers hoped to live among the Red Men in peace. They soon found they had a stiff fight ahead,with white neighbors to keep the land they had bought and cleared..... Reverend John Crandall and Tobias Saunders were appointed 'Conservators of His Majesty's Peace', a job that was no sinecure. Hardly had the settlers taken shelter in their dugouts and cabins when the long fight to oust them began. Saunders and Crandall found it necessary to use clubs to adjust some differences of opinion with the neighbors across the river."

As other references in our introduction bear evidence, these men and their Westerly compatriots were again and again subjected to suffering, abuse, imprisonment and loss, as they unflinchingly lived, to defend and preserve their little colony, regardless of the enormity of the would-be invaders. John Clark and Roger Williams, in pleading their cause before King Charles, said, "They have it in their hearts, if they may be permitted, to hold forth a lively experiment, that a flourishing colony may stand, yea best may be maintained, and that among English spirits, with a full liberty in religious concerns".

Not until 1728 was the boundary question settled by an agreement signed at Westerly the colony got what she had claimed from the beginning; that for which her unyielding men and women had prayed and contended even unto blood.

Yes, Westerly, made up of God-fearing, liberty-loving folks--many of whom were our kinsmen--saved a colony, yea, a state, end as Bruce V. Crandall puts it, "A Nation".

HISTORY MAKING ORGANIZATIONS.

The following excerpts were taken from an article appearing in a New York City paper in the early nineties: The Crandall Genealogical Association, organized last night at the Astor House, purpose to engage a genealogical expert, who will trace back their common ancestry as far as Colonial times, at least.

"I am the man who invented the typewriter girl!" Proudly said Lucien Stephen Crandall in Parlor H. Astor House, last night. 'You have a great deal to answer for', chorused John Albert Crandall, Ernest Lindell Crandall, Harrie Melvin Crandall, Henry Sargent Crandall, Chauncey W. Crandall, John Courtland Crandall, Jesse Armour Crandall, Bradford Francis Crandall, Edwin Joel Crandall, William Franklin Crandall, Henry Vaughn Crandall, Henry Lewis Crandall, Frederick H. Way and Rev. Charles E. Freeman, the last two married Crandall girls. "The world has a great deal to thank me for 'retorted Lucien Stephen Crandall' I invented the typewriter machine and in 1874 I first employed a young woman to write on my typewriter. If when I die each typewriter girl contributes a penny I'll have a monument as tall as the Statue of Liberty.

An illustrious Crandall, Joseph, founded Utica, N.Y. in 1704. Loving mothers and Brooklyn fathers should keep green the memory of Benjamin P. Crandall, first of the family in New York City. He invented the baby carriage.

John Courtland Crandall of 495 Cortland Ave., New York, organized the idea of the Genealogical Association. Lucien Stephen Crandall, the president, not only invented the blessed and beautiful typewriter girl but has eighty-three other inventions to his credit."

The John Crandall Society was organized at Venice, Florida, March 25, 1939. The organization was first suggested by Bruce V. Crandall to John C. Crandall during the summer of 1938. These two members of the Crandall clan agreed to meet at Venice, Fla. at the time of the convention of the descendants of First Families of America, then being organized by Bruce V. Crandall.

At the organization meeting were present, A. Julian Crandall, Ashaway, R.I., Mr. and Mrs. Orra S. Rogers, Plainfield, N.J., John C. Crandall, New Woodstock, N.Y., Mary Elysabeth Crandall, Three Lakes, Wisc., and Bruce Verne Crandall, Three Lakes, Wisc.

Bruce V. called the meeting to order and explained his thought that the Crandall family should have an organization as the best means of getting together genealogical and historical data and making permanent and safe records of them. He then suggested that John C. Crandall be made president of the organization and that Mary Elysabeth Crandall be made its secretary and that the organization be given the name of "The John Crandall Society" in honor of the pioneer ancestor of all the Crandalls in America. All present were in entire agreement. NOTE; The foregoing data of the 1939 organization was furnished by Mary Elysabeth Crandall. This organization, together with its corresponding members has played an important part in bringing about the publishing of the Crandall Recital.

Appendix V.

SAMUEL HUBBARD.

Dr. William Franklin Langworthy in his splendidly compiled 'Langworthy Genealogy', gives nearly four pages in featuring Samuel Hubbard.

It seems proper that a few lines should appear here relative to this man and his ancestral connection with many of the Crandalls especially descendants of Rev. Joseph and Deborah (Burdick) Crandall. Samuel was born in Mendolsham, Suffolk, Eng. in 1610. He was the son of James Hubbard who married Naomi Cocke of Ipswich. According to Foxes 'Book of Martyrs' Vol. 3, page 704 --which record Samuel referred to as fact Thomas Hubbard father of James (listed as Thomas Higbee) was burned at the stake during the reign of Queen (Bloody) Mary in 1555.

Samuel Hubbard arrived at Salem in October 1633 He located at Watertown. In 1635 he was among the sixty daring colonists, who, braving the terrible winter, marched through the wilderness to be numbered among the first settlers of Connecticut. Tase (Tacy) Cooper, born in 1608 in England, of noble parentage, was in the party, she and Samuel were married during the winter of 1636. They later moved to Springfield Mass. where three daughters, Ruth, Rachel and Berthia were born. Ruth the first white child to be born in Springfield married Robert Burdick, by which union she became the mother of all the Burdicks. Rachel married Andrew Langworthy and thereby became the mother of all the American Langworthys. Deborah Burdick, Dau. of Robert and Ruth, married Rev. Joseph Crandall, son of Elder John. To this marriage was born Joseph who married his second cousin Ann Langworthy, Dau. of Andrew and Rachel Langworthy. According to Dr.

Langworthy, Samuel Hubbard was a very important man, especially in the religious history of Rhode Island.

He and six others, one his wife, and one his Dau. Rachel Langworthy, founded the Seventh Day Baptist Church, Dec. 23, 2671

CRANDALL LINE BACK TO ADAM AND EVE.

Only the most daring would undertake such a compilation. Again, as in appendix II, we turn to the writings of Bruce Verne Crandall for the following expose of Adamic-Crandall generations. He in turn gave credit to Mrs. Ina O. Perrin of Velva, S.D. and later of 619 So. Central Ave., Lodi, Calif. and a cousin of hers--both Crandalls--each of whom spent many years in collecting the data.

It was a tradition in Mrs. Perrin's home that she was descended from Princess Elizabeth. We quote Bruce: "There seems to be no reason to doubt the correctness of the line back of Elizabeth Drake, the mother of Elder John Crandall, for the Drake family history is well known". He further states, "The King lines are well known and part of this record has a historical accuracy". Some of his listings are taken from 'Know your Ancestors' by Mrs. Spiller Kelley. He quotes Mrs. Kelley thus: "Matthew in his first chapter gives the line back 4,000 years., could not their descendants keep their up to the present day?. Further, "Rulers of Monarchies must keep their lines of descent in order to prove their Royalty and right to rule. The Irish and the Welsh depended upon their wisest men to keep their records.

Adam(B.C.4004). He died 3074 Gen.5:5.

Compiler's Note:-"I regret that after the death in August 1948 of Rev. Oscar Frank Stetson, to whom I had sent the Adam and Eve line to be included in the book, fourteen pages and 143 generations back from Eld. John Crandall, were never recovered. However I include here the line back to King Malcom 11(1005-1034) and if interested to trace back to Adam one can find the connection in the pamphlet 'The Book of Adam' by Harold King Bowen, 428 Vista Ave., Pasadena, 8, Calif. 22. Elder John Crandall, their son, of, Rhode Island.

It is claimed they disowned Eld. John because he left the English church and became a Baptist.

The question is--was there a Sir John Crandall in Shropshire, England about 1600-1650. it seems possible that there should be records that could be located.

In "Newmans History of the Baptists page 111" states that Dr. John Clark was born in Suffolk Co. and he and his two brothers, Thomas and Joseph were closely associated with Elder John Crandall in the church of the R.I. Baptists. It is claimed that Elder John Crandall came over from Shropshire County with Joseph Clark. It has also been said that Eld. John was a Scotchman.

FIRST GENERATION

1. JOHN CRANDALL, Colonial pioneer, First Baptist Elder, Deputy Commissioner, and statesman of Newport and Westerly, Rhode Island, the head of the Crandall family in America, was born in Monmouthshire, England, on the line between England and Wales in 1612. His mother is supposed to have been a Scotch lady. He came to Boston within a very few years after the landing of the Pilgrims, in 1634. Several writers have ascertained that he was associated with the Congregational Church at Salem as 1635 and that "he was certainly living in Providence as early as 1637" and while there are many reasons for believing these statements correct and that John Crandall, as a close associate of Roger Williams was one of the founders of Providence, unfortunately it seems impossible certainly to confirm them. Many of the original Providence records were early destroyed.

The first valid documentary account of John Crandall in New England shows him to have been actively identified with the Baptist Church in Newport, July 21, 1651. His name next is found, with that of Matthew West in a Freeman's list of Newport, 1655.

John Crandall was the first Baptist Elder at Westerly, "Elder Crandall was well calculated both by talent and sufferings to lead his people in their devotions. He took an active part in the border difficulties between Massachusetts and Connecticut and subsequently between Connecticut and Rhode Island, concerning the lines between the states."

"With other founders of Westerly Mr. Crandall settled on the Misquamicutt land before 1665. He was commissioner for a number of years, served as deputy from both Newport and Westerly, and in other capacities which evidence that he was a man of importance. Through the seven sons of Elder Crandall the name became a common one and the family numerous in Rhode Island." (From "Representative men and old families of Rhode Island.")

Through the marriage of Elder John Crandall's sons and daughters, the family became allied with other important pioneer families who were prominent in the early history of Rhode Island, and New England. Among these were the Gorton, Babcock, Burdick, Hubbard, and Witter families.

The name or origin of his first wife is not known, but it is recorded that she died in 1670 and was buried August 2 of that year in Westerly. From examination of the birth and marriage records of their children, and the dates at which sons were listed as freemen, it may be inferred that John Crandall was first married about the year 1649. He married, second, Hannah Gaylord.

Elder John Crandall died before November 29, 1676 at Newport where he was sojourning on account of the Indian War (King Philip's War).

The "Journal of American History" gives the following sketch of the life of Elder John Crandall, which is substantially correct with the probable exception of the account of his activities prior to 1651.

As early as 1635 Rev. John Crandall, who is believed to have been of Welsh ancestry, was living in Salem where, as elsewhere in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, there was at this time much opposition to all dissenters from the authorized tenets of the Puritans. John Crandall was the minister of the Salem church, but he adopted the opinions of the Baptists, which were very obnoxious to the Congregationalists, and in the autumn of 1635 he was dismissed as pastor. As did so many others of the early Baptists of New England he determined to settle in the Narragansett country. The Indians proved friendly and he obtained from them a grant of land. He has been called one of the founders of Providence. He was certainly living in Providence as early as 1637.

In 1669 he appears in "a list of the Free Inhabitants of the Town of Westerly" May the 18, (John Crandall's name headed the list). Directly after this he, with Tobias Saunders, was authorized by the colony to summon juries and hold courts, they being appointed "Conservators of His Majesty's Peace."

John Crandall was one of the original purchasers from Chief Sosoia of Narragansett of the Misquamicutt tribe, of the land comprising Westerly, from which Hopkinton was later formed. The townships of Westerly, Hopkinton, Charleston and Richmond, as they now are, were a tract called by the Indians Misquamicutt and on August 27, 1661 John Crandall was one of the nine signers of a petition to the Court of Commissioners for the Colony of Providence Plantations, in session at Portsmouth, for the purchase of that part of the tract which became Westerly. His house was near Burdens Pond and a part of it now stands, as one room in the homestead occupied by lineal descendants, of the ninth and tenth generations. Across from the house in the old orchard field is the original cemetery, in which twenty seven bodies are buried. There are three rows of graves containing nine bodies each. These rows of graves run parallel with a swamp near by. Elder John is buried in the row nearest the swamp in the end grave to the left as one stands facing the swamp. Next to his grave is that of his son John. Each of the twenty seven graves is indicated by a field stone some 14 inches in width, appearing four to eight inches above the ground set at the head while a smaller stone marks the foot of the grave. There is no inscription on any of the stones. On the 6th day of October 1932 A. Julian Crandall of Ashaway, Rhode Island and Rev. Wm. S. Crandall of Binghamton, New York, standing in the little historical burying ground, agreed that a suitable marker should be placed thereupon. They further concluded that a large native field granite boulder with a bronze plaque properly lettered, embedded in the same would be most suitable. The two third cousins resolved that they would sponser the project. He was the first Baptist Elder at Westerly and held a number of public offices at various times. In 1658, 1659, 1662, 1663 he was a Commissioner, and was a Deputy to the General Court in 1667, 1670 and 1671, representing Westerly during the two latter terms.

He had lived prior to his settlement at Westerly, at Newport.

There was much dispute between the colonies of Massachusetts and Connecticut as to their jurisdictions, and especially as to jurisdiction over grants in Rhode Island, which however, had been confirmed by a royal charter to their purchasers. A claim was made in 1662 by Connecticut of land reaching beyond Misquamicutt to Narragansett Bay. On October 17, 1667 a letter was sent by the Connecticut authorities to those of Rhode Island, complaining that John Crandall had taken possession of about a square mile of land, which he had laid out to his son, on the west side of the Pawcatuck River. On May 14, 1669 he and Joseph Torrey were appointed commissioners for the purpose of conferring with the Connecticut authorities concerning these land disputes. Certain individuals lent thirty five shillings to the Colony of Rhode Island in order to pay the expenses of Mr. Crandall to Connecticut. A few months later, on November 18, the governor and assistants of Connecticut sent a letter complaining that John Crandall and some others had appropriated a large tract of land in the township of Stonington, Connecticut. A reply to this complaint was sent by the Town of Westerly on March 11, 1669, signed by John Crandall and Tobias Saunders, in which all illegal seizure of land or other offense against the Colony of Connecticut was denied, and a counter charge was made; "but we are very sensible of great wrongs that we have sustained by them for many years." In 1671 the dispute grew so serious that Mr. Crandall, with others, were actually carried off by the Connecticut authorities and was imprisoned at Hartford. On May 2 of that year the Rhode Island assembly advised him not to yield to Connecticut's claims and assured him of the Colony's support and that his financial losses would be borne by the Colony.

The Reverend John Crandall was twice married. The name of his first wife is unknown, but she died in 1670 and was buried on August 2 of that year. He married, second, Hannah Gaylord.

The subjoining summary recorded events in the later life of John Crandall "of Newport and Westerly, Rhode Island" is from Austin's Authoritative Volumes "Genealogical Dictionary of Rhode Island," and "One Hundred and Sixty Allied Families of Rhode Island."

John Crandall was early associated with the Baptists, at Newport, subsequently becoming the first Elder of that denomination at Westerly.

1651, July 21. He, with John Clarke and Obediah Holmes, "being the representatives of the Church of Newport, upon the request of William Witter, of Lynn, arrived there, he being a brother in the Church, who by reason of his advanced age, could not undertake so great a journey as to visit the church. William Witter lived about two miles out of Lynn and the next day being Sunday, they spent in religious services at his house, and were there apprehended by two constables at the instance of the Massachusetts authorities, while Mr. Clarke was preaching, and the next morning they were sent to prison in Boston. For the dire offense of holding this little meeting, and on other frivolous pretexts Obediah Holmes was fined, imprisoned and whipped.

1651, July 31. He was sentenced to pay a fine of L5 or be publically whipped. He was released from prison upon his promise of appearing at next court.

1658; 59; 62; 63 Commissioner.

1661, August 27, he and eight others signed a letter of the Court of Commissioners of Rhode Island, concerning a tract of land at Westerly, that they and others desired approbation and assistance of Rhode Island in settling upon.

1661, September 9. He had half a share at Westerly assigned him.

1667, Deputy.

1667, October 17, Westerly. He was complained of in a letter from Connecticut to Rhode Island authorities, for having come on west side of Pawcatuck River and laid out about a mile square of land to his son.

1669, May 14. He and Joseph Torrey were appointed Commissioners to treat with Connecticut relative to jurisdiction of lands. The sum of 35 shillings was lent to the Colony of Rhode Island by individuals for John Crandall's voyage to Connecticut.

1669, May 18. His name was on the List of Inhabitants. (Westerly)

1669, November 18. A letter was sent him by Governor and Assistants, of Connecticut, complaining that he and others had appropriated a great parcel of Stonington township, and seeking for satisfaction.

1669, March 11. He and Tobias Saunders answered on behalf of Westerly denying any guilt in matter complained of; "but we are very sensible of great wrongs we have sustained by them several years." The letter closes: "As for your advice to agree with those, our neighbors of Stonington and the other gentlemen we hope that your colony and ours, will in the first place lovingly agree, and then we question not but that there will be an agreement between us and our neighbors of Stonington, and the rest of the gentlemen."

1670, June 19. He as Conservator of the Peace of Westerly, wrote a letter a little prior to this date, to the Governor of Rhode Island, informing him "of an entrance made into our jurisdiction by some of Connecticut, and of their carrying away some inhabitants prisoners."

1670, August 2. His first wife was buried.

1670, October 3. He deeded eldest son, John of Newport, "for love &c., all my goods, chattels, debts, household utensils, and all other personal estate, movable or immovable quick or dead-- putting him in quiet and peaceable possession by payment of 1s in silver, by his son."

1670, 1671. Deputy from Westerly.

1671, January 30. Bills were allowed by Assembly, for hire of a boat to go to Narragansett with Mr. John Crandall Sr. in the year 1670 and for hire of Sarah Reape's horse for use of Mr. John Crandall to go to Hartford.

1671, May 2. He, having been "as is asserted" apprehended and now is in durance, by the Colony of Connecticut and having desired the advice of the Governor &c. of Rhode Island whether to give bond or abide imprisonment, the Colony will bear his charges and endeavor to justify his actings therein.

1671, May 6. He was allowed 20 shillings, to bear his charge to Connecticut.

1675, January 23. In a letter from Ruth Burdick, to her father Samuel Hubbard, of Newport, she says, "Brother Crandall hath the ague and fever still, and have been but little amongst us this winter, Sister Crandall is brought to bed with a son, and is in a hopeful way." (Ruth Burdick's daughter Deborah (Samuel Hubbard's granddaughter) later married Elder John Crandall's son (by his first wife) Joseph.

He died in Newport, having moved there on account of the Indian War.

1676, November 29. Under this date Samuel Hubbard, writes from Newport to Mr. Edward Stennitt in London, and after speaking of the devastation caused by King Philip's War, he recounts the recent deaths in the First Baptist Church. He says: "of the old' church, First Mr. Joseph Torrey, then my dear brother John Crandall, then Mr. John Clarke, then William Weeden, a deacon, then John Salmon; a sad stroke in very deed, young men and maids to this day I never knew or heard the like in New England." Samuel Hubbard also wrote a few years later; "my dear brother John Crandall of Squamicut, is dead and his first wife, a Sabbath keeper, the first that died in that blessed faith in New England."

His second wife was Hannah Gaylord, born 30 Jan.

Home of John C. Crandall

1647, and probably was daughter of William and Ann (Porter) Gaylord, of Windsor, Connecticut. The said Hannah married a Crandall as is shown by the settlement of her brother Hezekiah Gaylord's estate in 1677. Elder John Crandall died at Newport November 29, 1676. From the compiler the following data of Elder John has been furnished: That he was born probably Shropshire, England near the Welch border. The western portion of this county was formerly a part of Wales and later annexed to England. Hence the reason why some authorities have made the assertion that Elder John Crandall was a Welchman. One good authority states that he died 29 Nov. 1676 at the age of 67 yrs. which would indicate that he was born in 1609 and judging from the known ages of some of his associates, this would seem probable. His first wife by whom he had 7 children has not been positively identified but record shows that she died 1 Aug. 1670. (Mildred Small of Etna, Pa. states she found in the records in Washington, D.C. that the first wife of Elder John was Mary Opp who died 20 Aug. 1669) Elder John married second, Hannah Gaylord, b. 30 Jan. 1647; d. 3 Aug. 1678. After the death of Eld. John his widow married, second, John Cottrell, Jr. Hannah Gaylord was the dau. of William (William, John Nicholas) and Ann (Porter) Gaylord.

2 JOHN CRANDALL, of Eld. John, b. abt. 1649 in Newport, R.I.; d. 1704; m. 18 June, 1672 in Warwick, R.I. by John Green, J.P., Elizebeth Gorton, dau. of Samuel and Mary (Maplet) Gorton. (one record gives her as Elizebeth (Burton) Gorton). (Samuel Gorton b. 1592; d. 1677; was in Boston 1636; Plymouth 1638; settled in Warwick, R.I. 1641).

John called himself the son and heir of John Crandall of Newport, deceased. He confirmed to his "beloved brothers Jeremiah and Eber, now resident of Newport, and in tuition of their mother, Hennah Crandall, a certain house formerly the Mansion House of my fether John Crandell together with 200 acres thereto belonging, lying and being in westerly."

3 JAMES CRANDALL, of Eld. John, b. 1651 probably in Newport, R.I.; took oath of allegiance in Westerly 17 Sept. 1679; freemen in Westerly 1681.

(Howard Stillman Crandall of Westerly spent many yeers compiling the Crandall records. He worked especially on the line of James and the following is taken from his letter to Prof. Albert Rogers Crandall)

James became dissatisfied with the settlement of his father's estate (leaving all to the eldest son which was the old English custom); left home when he became 21, going down the Pawcatuck River which runs into the ocean near the end of Fisher's Island and made his home almost opposite Wetch Hill on Long Island where he merried a girl whose sister had married a man by the name of Raynor who lived in Suffolk Co. on the east end of Long Island. Because of his wife's religion, which was not of the Seventh Day Baptist faith, James was disowned by the rest of the family. James had quite a large family. His eldest son Samuel Nelson desiring a better education went to Manhattan. His fether and the rest of his family removed to Cepe Mey co., N.J. where the exodus of whalers on Long Island had found new fields to explore. After receiving his education Samuel went to Duchess Co., N.Y. and probably had a large family. Soon after, his two older brothers followed him. Samuel had sons Eben, Samuel and James and probably others as there ere records of many Crandalls in this locality and Schaghticoke, Rensselaer Co., N.Y. and Cold Springs, Putnam Co., N.Y. which seems to point to the fact that they ere the descendants of James. Being dissatisfied in Duchess Co. they after a time migrated to Rochester, N.Y. thence to Canada and finally some of them were in Ann Arbor, Michigan where we have Palmer Crandall and later Tanner Crandall. Many of these Canada Crandalls corresponded with Howard to establish their line with James. Also in the history of Tomkins and Tioga Counties, N.Y. is an account of the line of a Henry Crandall son of Eber and Dinah (Vaughn), b. 22 Sept. 1795 in Schaghticoke, Rensselaer Co., N.Y.; d. 9 Mar. 1882 in Millport, N.Y.; m. 19 Oct. 1816 in Smithville, N.Y.; Elize, dau. of Charles Hill of Madison Co., N.Y. Eber Crandall was a native of Cold Spring, Duchess Co., N.Y. having been born there in 1755. His father having lived and died there. His father James was of English ancestry settling on Long Island before the dawn of the 17th century. Eber moved to Argyle, Washington Co., N.Y. when Henry was an infant and after other moves he finelly came to Tomkins Co. where he died.

The history of Tomkins Co. estabishes without doubt another line from James, son of Eld. John. While some positive connections are missing from detes and locations it is safe to assume that they are in the line of James and they will be found in a later section of the geneeology.

6 PETER CRANDALL of Westerly and Ashaway, R.I. son of Eld. John, was b. abt. 1655 in Westerly and died 1734. He married Mary Babcock, dau. of James Jr. and Jene () Babcock. The records of this family are not clear. The data taken from Arnold's Vit. Records of R.I. contain a mistake, but just what it is end where it is seems impossible to determine at this date. From the records it would appear that Jane____, who first married James Babcock, Jr. later married a Brown; that as the wife of James Babcock, she was the mother of Mary who married Peter Crandall and that as the wife of Mr. Brown, she was the mother of George Brown who married Charity, the dau. of Peter and Mary (Babcock) Crandall. Howard Crandall tried during his lifetime to straighten out the tangle with the result that he wrote:
By the records Mary Babcock and George Brown were half brother and sister; that Charity Crandell was the wife and also the niece of George Brown; that Peter Crandall was brother-in-law to his son-in-law George Brown; that Jane Brown was grandmother and mother-in-law of Charity (Crandall) Brown; that Jane Brown was mother-in-law of Peter Crandall, which would make Mary Babcock, wife of Peter Crandall, his sister-in-law. This would also make Charity marrying her uncle, George Brown. Mr. Crandall finally gave up the problem and no one since his time has been able to solve it.

It would appear that George Brown and Charity (Crandall) Brown had the following children:

George

Peter

John

Elizabeth

Sarah

Ruth

William, who was left by will all his father's Cooper's tools.

Peter Crandall took the oath of allegiance in Westerly 17 May 1679; was a Freeman in 1681; deputy from 1699-1704; Justice of Peace and Lieut. of Militia and was an important man of his time.

Hubbard was dau. of Samuel and Tacy Cooper Hubbard. Tacy (Tasy, Tase) Cooper came to Dorchester, Mass. 9 June 1634 from England and was married to Samuel Hubbard when she was 28 yrs. old. (Hist. of Windsor, Conn. from the Literary Diary of Ezra Stiles, Vol. 3 p. 28). Samuel Hubbard came to Salem, Mass. in 1633 and married Tacy Cooper 4 Jan. 1636 at Windsor, Conn. by Mr. Ludlow. They were both in the party that marched through the wilderness from Watertown, Mass. during the terrible winter of 1635 to become the founders of Conn. They were persecuted in Mass. for expressing their Baptist' views. Samuel Hubbard finally in 1648 found refuge in R.I. where he was associated with Eld. John Crandall and others in founding the colony of R.I. which stands above all others for its democratic principles.

Rev. Joseph Crandall was an ordained minister of the Seventh Day Baptist Church in Newport, R.I. 8 May 1715.

11. JOHN CRANDALL, of John and Elizabeth (Gorton) Crandall, b. abt. 1673 probably in Kingstown, R.I. There is nothing more in any R.I. records about this John. John, his father, was a blacksmith. We do find records of the John who was the blacksmith and settled in Cape May Co., N.J. We have records to prove that on 25 Mar. 1707 he recorded his earmark and that his son John recorded his earmark 17 May 1725 in the same county. We also find a "John Jr." who was recorded as having 50 acres of land and a household in 1774. In 1768 this John was listed with 6 cattle and horses and 7 sheep. (Gen. Mag. of N.J. Vol. 14.) We have a John whom we assume was of the 7th generation from Eld. John b. in N.J. 1768; d. 20 Oct. 1838; m. Elizabeth _____. He came from N.J. to Brooklyn, Pa. where he died.

To substantiate the assumption that this is a line from John, son of John and Elizabeth (Gorton) the compiler of these records in 1940 stopped overnight at Troy, Pa. and talked with a Miss Sarah Crandle who belongs to the D.A.R. and who said it was a family tradition that the line was Eld. John, John, John. She did not give the 4th, 5th and 6th ancestral line but named John of the 7th generation, Merrick of the 8th and Andrew of the 9th who was her father. She was born 5 Aug. 1885 and resided in Troy, Pa.

The N.J. Archives Vol. 32 records a John Crandall a blacksmith of Capr. May Co., N.J. whose will was dated 14 Apr. 1730. Inventory dated 20 Oct. 1730. Elizabeth Crandall and William John, both of Cape May Co. were named administrators.

137 SAMUEL CRANDALL of South Kingstown, R.I., son of Samuel and Mary () Crandall, b. 1 Feb. 1706 in North Kingstown, R.I.; m. Sarah _____.

Note: Edwin G. Davis said that he began the study of this family when he was 18 yrs. old and had not solved his problems at the time of his death when he was over 80 yrs. old. Prof. Albert Rogers Crandell did not solve the problem. Bruce V. Crandell of Three Lakes, Wisc. whose fether, the late Rev. Lathan Augustus Crandall thought he had solved the problem and he gave the records for the Central N.Y. Gen. His son later found that they were incorrect and this family is in question.

399 Elizabeth, b. abt. 1768; m. 25 July 1786 John Bartlett at Bangall, Duches Co., N.Y.

Wilson Crandall mentioned in his will Mettie-melina Bartlett and said she was his niece.

138 GEORGE CRANDALL, son of Samuel and Mary () Crandall, b. 29 May 1739 (1741); m. 20 Sept. 1761 in South Kingstown, R.I. by John Webster, J.P., Tacy Tanner, dau. of John and Susannah (West) Tanner; b. 22 July 1742 in Charlestown, R.I. (Davis says Richmond, R.I.).

John Tanner, b. abt. 1694 was the son of William Sr. and Mary Babcock (his second wife). She was the dau. of Job and Jane (Crendall) Babcock and the granddaughter of Eld. John. Susannah West was the dau. of Francis and Sarah (Meakins) West.

Bruce V. Crandall, a descendant said that he talked with his great grandfather, John Myers Crandall and remembers very distinctly many of the events that could be recalled by his grandfather which reached back to Revolutionary times. Therefore we have some authentic data of this family. George, it appears, lived in many places. According to the deposition when he applied for his pension, he said he was born in Oblong, N.Y. This is doubted as it does not seem reasonable that in those days he would have traveled back to R.I. to be married. He was probably born in South Kingstown, R.I. where he married and where his wife, Tacy Tanner was born. We know that he lived in Vermont till Burgoyne's invasion in 1777 when he went to North East, Duches Co., NY. where he lived with his brother Samuel in Little Nine Partners. From there he went to Stephentown, N.Y. abt. 1795, thence to Easton in 1799, thence to Chatham in 1800; to Davenport, Otsego Co. in 1802, and finally to Cerman and Smithville, where he lived with his sons, William and Caleb alternately. From the above deposition we learn that in 1777 he had five children and it is possible that he had others not living with him. According to Albert R. Crandall and Edwin G. Davis we are told there were others and it is certain that there were some living in the same town as George, who from their dates could have been his children. These are listed with his children and followed by a question-mark.

Onondaga Centennial, part 1, p. 828 says that George had two sons who lived to be over 100 yrs. old and a dau. who lived to the age of 116.

Pioneers of Utica, N.Y. recites that Lewis Crandall celebrated his 100th birthday at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. T. Davis, 5 generations being represented at the gathering; that Lewis spent most of his life in Westmorland, N.Y.; that he came of a long lived race, his father living to the age of 104 and his sister to the great age of 115.

The following letter was received on Ezekiel Crandall:

Mr. John C. Crandall:
New Woodstock, N.Y.

Dear Sir:

As I promised I am sending you the Revolutionary War Service of Ezekiel Crandall.
From Veterans Administration.
Ezekiel Crandal - S. 28696.

The record of Ezekiel Crandal is furnished herein as found in the papers on file in his claim for pension, S. 28696, based upon service in the Revolutionary War.

Ezekiel Crandal was born in the year 1747, in Westerly, Washington Co., R.I.

While a resident of Charlestown, Washington Co., R.I. he was a minute man from early in the war,
guarding the sea-coast, served as private in Capt.
Augustus Stanton's Co., Col. James Babcock's R.I.
Regiment, three months when the British burned Stonington, Conn. and was in a severe engagement there, three months at Noyes Neck and was in an engagement there, three months at Point Judith where there was a skirmish, and three months in 1778 in Gen. Sullivan's Expedition and was in the battle of Newport; he stated that he was called out at various times and continued in the service until the close of the war: a part of the time he was guard

General Joseph Stanton.

After the war, the soldier moved to Stonington, Conn. and remained 5 yrs. from there moved to Pittsfield, Berkshire Co., Mass. where he lived 10 yrs. and then moved to New Berlin, Chenango Co., N.Y. He was allowed pension on his application executed Oct. 19 1832, at which time he resided in New Berlin Chenango Co., N.Y.

There is no data relative to soldier's family.

(Signed) A. D. Hiller
Assistant to Administrator.

I think Mr. Crandall's age at death was 91 instead of 97, probably one of those hard to read figures. You see he was born in 1747 and died 1838, making him 91.

Peter was a Revolutionary soldier.

They moved to Berlin, Rensselaer Co., N.Y. about 1797, bringing their four oldest children with them, but whether his father and mother (Joshua and Abigail) came with them, or soon after, is uncertain. The probability is that the children of Joshua's second marriage, then living, came with them or within a few years. Joseph, Clement and Martin were at the funeral of their father, Joshua, in Feb. 1817 at the house of their brother Peter where he lived and died.

Clement and Martin L. were then living in Troy, N.Y., Peter and Joseph in Berlin, and Nathan previously in some part of Rensselaer Co.

It is unknown whether any of the children of the first marriage of Joshua came to Rensselaer Co. to reside. There is no evidence that they did.

When he came to Berlin, the country was mostly a wilderness, and he had to endure the hardships and privations of a pioneer; but in a few years he had a comfortable home and surroundings. After the close of the War of 1812, what was then called the "Genesee Country", having become more known, he and his two younger sons, who were with him, became anxious to exchange their Eastern for a Western home, though they were to encounter the hardships of another wilderness.

A few years previous to this, a brother-in-law (Jesse Rogers) and a short time later, his son Luke, had located on the East side of the Genesee River in the town of Amity, Allegany Co., N.Y. near the present village of Belmont, and it was natural that he should choose a place near his relatives, he, with his two youngest sons, removed there in 1818, and soon became owners of farms in the vicinity.

His farm was a part of the Van Ransselaer Manor, upon which an annual rent had to be paid at the office of the patroon in Albany: the rents varied according to locations and quality of land. This system had become irksome to the lessees, and a few years so disagreeable, that a great number of them refused to pay their rents, and the result was, the "anti-rent war" as it was called, which continued until a purchase of land or compromise was affected. This system doubtless had its influence upon them in making the change.

Alphonso Crandall was in the Civil War and was captured by the confederates and put in Libby Prison, where after a time with a Dr. Cook(?) and another man they made their escape to the north using turpentine on the soles of their boots to kill the scent from the bloodhounds. It was published in the Stars and Stripes about 1885 or 1886, which I read about 15 to 20 years later. He was wounded in the shoulder by shrapnel, and if you will notice the left shoulder droops and the arm was more or less withered; although he could feed and dress himself, he never worked after the war. He was hospitalized in Washington, D.C. for a long time.

William was also in the Civil War but came out all O.K.

This useful minister of Christ was born in R.I.
(then a British Colony) in 1770. When abt. 5 yrs. of age he removed with his father to Chester, N.S. In early life he received religious impressions which finally resulted in his conversion after which he was baptised by Rev. James Innis. Constrained by the love to Christ and the souls of men, he commenced preaching the gospel in the year 1800 and became a successful avangelist. He traveled extensively and almost everywhere he went the Lord blessed his labors.
In 1809 he visited Digby Co. in which for almost 30 years he lived and preached the Cospel. The church at Sissibou which had been raised up by the instrumen-tality of Elder Towner, was visited by Mr. Crandall.
His message of salvation was attended by the Spirit's power and a blessed religious revival extending into the various sections of the township of Digby was the result. About seventy converts were baptised at West Port and at Long Island. This revival was also mighty on Digby Neck, where a church was organized the same year, of which the subject of this sketch became the pastor. Not long after this period Elder Crandall (then a widower) was united in marriage to Miss Nancy Titus, a pious lady. His clerical labors were confined henceforth chiefly to Digby Neck where multitudes were converted and added to the church.

Not long after Elder Crandall became a resident of Digby Neck, he felt a strong desire to preach in the town of Digby and he was indeed the first Baptist minister that ever proclaimed the Gospel there. He did so, however, in the face of opposition and violence. It was with much difficulty that he could procure a place in which to hold a meeting. Mrs. McDormand, a widow, friendly to religion, opened her dwelling house and invited him to preach beneath her humble roof, but the meeting was disturbed by a riotous mob, who stoned the house and threatened the preacher with violence. In the midst of the lawless uproar, Andrew Snodgrass, Esq. a worthy magistrata, dispersed the rioters and Rev. Crandall finished his religious service without further molestation. Surviving brethren who were then members of the church love to speak of revivals that transpired in 1812 and in 1818 when many were converted and added to the church.

In fact, during Elder Crandall's pastorate of the church, there were many seasons of God's refreshing and delivering power among the people. He had 4 preaching stations, viz; At Cullivers Hole, Trout Cove, Sandy Cove and Little River; these stations were miles apart. Sometimes a revival was confined to one of these localities and at other times it was general, extending through all the settlements on Digby Neck.

In 1836, the church of which Mr. Crandall was pastor had so increased and the members were so scattered that division was considered advisable. Accordingly, in that year, the members who were resident at Sandy Cove and Little River took their dismission, and were organized into the second Digby Church. At this period of Elder Crandall's useful life his retrospection of his labors must have been a source of joy and gratitude to God. Twenty-seven years before, he had come to that part of the country, where there were few genuine disciples of Jesus Christ, and now he was the diocesan of two flourishing churches and might, in addressing the Lord, use the language of the patriarch, Jacob:- "I am not worthy of the least of all thase mercias, and of all the truth which Thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with thy staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands."

In the following year he received a startling intimation that a fatal disease was preying upon his physical organization. It wast too plain to himself as well as to others that his earthly work was nearly done. For years he had been slightly affected with a disease which at length was producing intense pain and consequent weakness.

At this trying period while his whold system was wreathing in agony, his soul was staid upon God. Tho the shadow of death, like an invisibla spirit, hoverad around the bed, faith illuminated the scenes and disarmed the last enemy of its sting. The King of terrors was there but ha was calmly viewad by the expiring man of God. Ha talkad frealy with all visitors who stood by his bedside. God's everlasting love to sinners still employed his tongue. Viewing the grave of which he was soon to become a moulding tenant, ha spok, in the spirit of joy and triumph of the resurrection. If the vally of death be a dark passage, to him it was brightened by the promisas of God

"In all my life" said the dying saint, "I can see the leadings of Divine Providence". At eight years of age, God was with me, convincing me that I was a sinner; at twenty-two, He revealed His Son in my heart, the hope of glory; at thirty, His hand was upon me to preach the gospel; He has been with me in my sickness--He is filling my sould with his love now, O, blessed be His name; and as it respects the future, I have no doubt." Such expressions as these he continued to make, in feeble and broken whispers, until 2 April, 1838 when he ceased to breathe.

"In Rev. I.E. Bill's History of the Baptists" is an extended account of the life and labors of this gifted and successful preacher. Lack of space prevents our presenting more than a few extracts from that work. He was one of the Calvinistic type and tho very successful in his religious relations, baptising hundreds of people in provinces, yet he labored under great disadvantages, and suffered persecution as well. Having been elected to a seat in the provincial Legislature, he took a decided stand in favor of equal rights; he also occupied a pulpit in a Frederickton church every Sabbath. The Legislature at that time was entirely in the hands of the High Tory Party, who believed in "vested rights" and the right of the "select few" to govern the many. It was counted treason to dissent from the church and state notions of that day. Consequently, the government determined to get ride of him, and passed an act decreeing that no avowed preacher of the gospel should have a seat in the Legislature. He was given to understand that if he preached the next Sunday, he would be dismissed from the Legislature early in the week. On Sunday, as usual, Mr. Crandall was in his place and as was expected, early in the week an order passed the government forbidding him to occupy his seat. It was proof of his popularity that for many years after this event, no man could succeed in a contested election in Westmorland County, unless he had Mr. Crandall interested on his side. For many years before his death, he took no active part in politics; yet his sentiments were very generally known and probably to him, more than any other single individual, the province stands more indebted for the diffusion of correct sentiments regarding the matter of civil and religious liberty. He preached within six weeks of his death and he died the death of a truly Christian hero.

Mr. Bill's History is full of allusions to his preaching and the great power he exerted over the souls of men wherever he went. We would advise all who can do so to get a copy of the book; certainly none of his descendants can afford to do without it.

Church, but about the time of his 2nd marriage he joined the Methodists as class leader and chorister and at one time his choir was made up entirely of Crandalls, himself and his own family. The family of Israel and Demaris (Pendleton) Wightman continued from page 60.

233-D. DEMARIS PENDLETON⁶ (Demaris, James, Joseph, Rev. Joseph, Eld. John); Of-LeRoy Twp. Genesee Co. N.Y. born Westerly, R.I. Aug. 9, 1773. died in Franklinville, Cattaraugus Co. N.Y. married in Norwich, Conn. Aug. 4, 1790. ISRAEL WIGHTMAN³ (Valentine⁴, Daniel³, Rev. Valentine², George¹). born abt. 1765 in Norwich, Conn. Isreel went from Conn. to N.Y. State soon after his marriage and was living in Hudson Twp. Herkimer Co. in 1800. About 1804 he removed to New Haven, Addison Co. Vt., where he remained some ten years, acknowledging from there his inheritance from his father's estate in Bozra, Conn. being co-heir to a tract of 191½ acres in Columbia Twp. Herkimer Co. N.Y. He subsequently lived in New Hampshire two years returning from there to New York State. By 1818 the family were residents of LeRoy Twp. Genesee Co. N.Y. where they remained.

A grand Dau. of Israel's second son William W. contributes the information that Israel met his death under mysterious circumstances. Israel was a farmer and trapper. Having left home one morning for Marietta, Ohio with a load of furs, he spent several days there, sold his pelts for cash and started home with the money, about four hundred dollars, on his person. As he did not return home, inquiry was made at the Hotel where he stayed every spring when on these trips, and it was learned he had left with two men. Nothing was ever learned of his fate, horses, wagon and all having completely disappeared. The same informant says that "Dimnis" was never reconciled and would sit continuously at a window wondering "why Isreel dosen't come".

400 TANNER CRANDALL, of German and Smithville, N.Y. and Springfield, Pa. In 1854 he went to Michigan. He may have been the son of George and Tacy (Tanner) Crandall. The date of birth; the residence in German and Smithville, and the name Tanner leads to this belief. Rev. Leslie Farnsworth, a descendant agrees with this theory. It is also noted that he named a son Lewis, and it is known that George and Tacy had a son Lewis. Bruce V. Crandall another descendant states that he never heard of any of his family speak of a Tanner and it is possible that this was his middle name, the first being William of Caleb as we find no families under those names altho we know that one at least if not both married and lived in Smithville and later in northern Penn.

The name of Tanner's first wife was Susannah which appears on deeds of record. He married a second time according to descendants Grace Burnham, Devan Beardslee and Myrtie Reeser of East Smithfield, Penn.

N.Y.; d. 9 May 1812 in Dutchess Co.; m. 1797 in Dutchess Co., Martha Ann (Peggy A.) Thorn, b. 1781; d. 23 Aug. 1866, aged 85 yrs. 11 mos. She was buried in Breeseport Cemetery. A picture of the grave marker reads "Peggy A., wife of Rev. J. Sturtevant, died 23 Aug. 1866 aged 85 yrs. 11 mos." Another marker in the same cemetery reads "Hannah, relict of A. J. Pratt, and daughter of B. and P. A. Crandall, died 5 Feb. 1869 aged 68 yrs and 6 mos. Our dear Mother." This indicates that Hannah was a daughter of Benjamin and Peggy Ann (Thorn) Crandall.

Some authorities give Zachariah as the husband of Peggy Ann Thorn but the above markers would indicate that she was the wife of Benjamin as given by Elizabeth McMillan, a descendant.

Benjamin probably lived for many years in North East Town, Dutchess Co. as a Benjamin CRANLLE signed the Association of the Provincial Congress in North East, Dutchess Co. on 5 July 1775. (Calendar of N.Y. Historical Manuscripts, Sec. of State, vol 1, p. 57.) and a Benjamin CRANDELL was listed there in the 1790 census as having 3 sons and 5 daughters. Other CRANDELLS in North East in 1790 were, James with 2 sons and 2 daughters; John with one son and 4 daughters; Joseph with 1 son and 1 daughter; Laben with 4 sons and 2 daughters; Feuben with 1 son and 2 daughters; and Samuel with 5 sons and 4 daughters.

A Laban also appears in Stephentown, Rensselaer County with 1 son and 2 daughters.

James also appears in Washington, Dutchess Co. with the same family.

In Stephentown there were two Johns, Thomas with 4 sons and 6 daughters, Rensal, Samuel all, except where indicated having smaller families than those of the same name in North East.

Laban signed the Association with reservations. Since a period of nine months was consumed in taking this census and the reasons for it were not clearly defined at the time, errors are to be expected.

Fernow's History of N.Y. in the Revolution, Vol. 15, p. 350:

Benjamin CRANDEL, private under Col. Peter Yates, in Capt. Cornelius Wiltse's company, in the Second Regiment of Dutchess County Militia.

History of Dutchess Co. (Smith):

The 2nd Regiment of Dutchess Co. Militia (Foumbout Precinct) was later incorporated into the 4th Regiment of Albany County Militia in which the same officers appear.

Benjamin had brothers Laban and Richard (Possibly Rauben as no record can be found of e Richard) and joined the Baptist ministry after the war and continued to preach until his death. In 1815 he and his family moved to Peach Orchard, Seneca Co. but he found it necessary to return east to settle up some affairs. He made the trip on horseback altho then about 65 years of age, contracted pneumonia when he arrived and died there. His stone is said to be used as a walk by the present owner of the property where he was buried.

His widow later married a Sturdevant and is buried in Breeseport as "Peggy" Sturdevant. Her daughter's stone reads "Hannah, dau of Benjamin and P.A. Crandell."

In 1815 Laban Benjamin Crandall settled near Peach Orchard where he lived for three years, then went to Leggett's Mill where he remained for five years. From there he moved to Wellsboro, Pa. where he stayed three years, then lived in New York City, Millport and finally Montour Falls. He had four children:

Nancy Jane.
Daniel Eli.
Diantha Susan, m. John Scott and had a daughter Diantha Crandall Scott.

(* son of Laban and Molly (Seein) Crandall).

Note: There has been found no positive proof that Reuben was son of Laban, but Laban had a Reuben and from the fact that Reuben names his first child Laban which was a custom in those days also that he was born in the place where Laban lived and from the similarity in the names of his children to those of his ancestors it is concluded that he was the son of Laban.

Note: The writer called on Mrs. Addie (Crandall) Green, daughter of William H.H. Crandall when she was about 90 years old and confined to the Cortland County Home suffering from a broken hip. Her mind was clear and she said that the family were all buried on top of a hill between Homer and East Homer and the yard was marked by a tall pine tree. Old residents did not seem to know of any such cemetery but later, about 5 years, the writer in visiting the cemetery at Homer was told by a hunter that there was an old cemetery on the top of the hill. An examination disclosed the cemetery with the tall pine tree still standing. There were found the markers of Elias, Avery and other members of the family.

Mrs. Green also said that her mother died at the age of 38 when she (Addie) was 13 years old; that Avery had a daughter Mariette who married Peter VanSlyke; that James married 1st Dorcas Harvey and 2nd, Irene Bennett and gave the names of all the children of James including her uncle Rev. deceased and that Theodore S. Crandall of Savoy, Mass. and Peter Crandall (No. 1182) of Dunnville, Dunn Co., Wis. were children of Samuel (a deceased brother of John) and Louise (Stamp) Crandall of Lower Lockport, N.Y. and that Shaver and Esther O'Hearn of Oneida, N.Y.; John Nutting of DeRuyter, N.Y.; Charles Nutting of Fayetteville, N.Y. and Jane Hildreth of the state of Minn. (place and residence not obtained) were children of Elizabeth Nutting, a deceased sister of said John, who claim to be owners of land formerly of said John, deceased, subject to dower rights. It is recited that Almon Frock is a tenant on said land. The petition asks that commissioners be appointed to set off to the widow of John her dower rights, which was granted. This would indicate that John and Hannah had no living children at the time of his death.

Note: By Arthur Wellington Anderson, 201 Van Buren St., Jamestown, N.Y., author of "The Conquest of Chautauqua" wrote under date of July 4, 1931 to Mrs. Emory P. Crandell, Fredonia, N.Y. who sent the letter to the writer of what he found concerning "Jinks Crandle"

"In the record book of school district #15, Busti, N.Y. A report appears addressed to the commissioners of common schools, in which the names of persons having children in school there, and living in that district, are recorded. Among these is the name of Jinks Crandle, this spelling probably due to the illiteracy of the period. Here Jencks Crandall was credited with three children. The date of this report is 11 April 1842. In 1843 report, Jencks Crandall's name appears as a trustee of the school district. (15). and again with 3 children. We assumed that he owned property, a farm, as we find mentioned, in a report of 1843 that a fence is to run within 8 feet of "Mr. Crandle's line, perhaps district (15) of Busti was originally in Ellicott, as Busti was formed from Ellicott and Harmony.

591 ELIZABETH (BETSEY) CRANDALL of Blue Island, Ill., dau. of John and Edith (Austin) Crandall, b. in Moira, N.Y. on 5 Mar. 1819; d. on 1 Aug. 1892 in Blue Island, Ill; m. on 4 Mar. 1845 to *Otis Murray Wattles who was b. in Ripley, N.Y. on 8 July, 1820 and d. 3 Feb. 1890 in Blue Island, Ill.

*Note: Otis Murray Wattles was born of Scotch-Irish parents in the town of Ripley, N.Y. He was one of a family of 12 children. Ripley, Cheutaquaque Co. is situated in the western part of N.Y. near Lake Erie.

He left N.Y. (then called York State to distinguish from N.Y. City) the 24th day of June, 1838. He was sixteen years of age at the time. He came West with a married sister, Mrs. Ruby Mead and her family. They had, for their traveling conveyance, a wagon covered with home-spun goods, drawn by oxen. They arrived in the village of Chicago on 29 Aug. 1838, having been over two months on the way. They went immediately to Blue Island where their sister, Mrs. Julie Rexford, with her husband, kept the only hotel in the small village. For several years, he lived at the Rexford Hotel, making himself useful by helping his sister, Mrs. Rexford. "into that pioneer life, he being blessed with a robust constitution, entered with great vigor".

For many years he used to "team it" between Chicago and Danville which is situated in the southern part of Illinois. This work which brought him into contact with many people, made him many true friends.

At the time he reached Blue Island, there were but three families. They were Steven Jones, a blacksmith, Norman Rexford, hotel owner and a Mr. Britton. As the village grew in size, he held as office of trust for the people, the position of school Trustee, Tax Collector and Constable. He was a member of the Free Will Baptist Church.

For a time after their marriage, Otis and Elizabeth occupied a small two room house. After some time, they bought a tract of 80 acres of land from a Mr. Ogden of Chicago, who had bought large sections from the United States Government. On their land they built a home, where they worked to pay for it, and reared a family. This land, purchased from Mr. Ogden cost them one dollar per acre. They used the land for farming and stock raising. He raised many hogs which he sold in Chicago for one dollar per hundred pounds. In this manner, along with her continued sewing, they paid for their land and built their home. From a small village in their early pioneer days, Blue Island had grown to be quite a village, but was not an organized town until 1872. In later years, the farm was added as a sub-division of Blue Island and platted into city lots.

In 1863, Otis met with a severe accident, caused by the run-away pair of spirited horses he was so proud to own. From that time, he was unable to work. They led a quiet happy life with their children and relatives of which there had become very many in that territory.

Elizabeth (Betsey) Crandall, left home in Moira, N.Y. with a brother Alvah in 1841. They were conveyed by stage to Plattsburg, N.Y. where they took transportation on a canal boat for Chicago. This was the only means of travel at that time. It took three weeks for the trip; one week passing through the Welland Canal. She and her brother went to Bachelor's Grove where another brother Heman lived. She went from there to the home of their sister Martha Jones, in Blue Island where she secured employment and where she met and married Otis Murray Wattles at the Rexford Hotel.

Otis and Elizabeth are buried in Mount Greenwood Cemetery which is near Blue Island.

Note: Joseph Crandall, b. 4 Apr. 1777; m. 17 Apr. 1797 at Leyden, Mass. to Esther Crumb who was b. 3 Apr. 1777. Four children were born in the Leyden home, previous to 1806, when the spirit of emigration, swept this family westward into Chenango Co. New York State, a section of the country which was then a wilderness. In 1805, Phinaas Crumb, father-in-law of Joseph Crandall, came to the south-eastern part of Plymouth township and there built a log house. This house was erected near the spring just north of the old Leeman Smith residence. In the spring of 1806, Joseph moved his family and household goods from Mass. in a two-horse sleigh, living for one year with his wife's folks. At the end of the year, Joseph built his own log house, a short distance east, on the south side of the road. The mound of the old chimney may be still visible. In 1831, Joseph Crandall moved into the Keith house on the Preston road about one half mile out of Norwich, where the road forks north. Later, in 1834, he and his son Joseph contracted with Charles Randall for eleven acres of land on the west side of the Preston road above the Keith property. He built and occupied the house known later for many years as the Elisha Crandall house. The house in which Elisha lived and died. Joseph, Jr. lived and died in the house to the West, which at present (1936) is owned and occupied by his grandson Lathan Crandall.

Joseph Crandall, Sr. was a stone engraver. Much of his work can be seen today in some of the old cemeteries near Norwich, N.Y. One of these is known as the Aldrich cemetery between Norwich and South Plymouth. Particular skill is shown on the stone marking the grave of his daughter Polly. Both Joseph and Esther are buried in this cemetery. His masterpiece in head stone work appears in the McCullough-Tracey Cemetery, in Preston Township on the Ravine Road south west of Norwich. The stone faces the back wall, and bears the artist's name at the top. It is worth going miles to see.

In 1848, Joseph Crandall, Sr. moved into the house just west of the Keith house, where he died in 1851. His wife Esther lived thereafter with her son William B. dying in 1873 in her 98th year.

He was not a robust man, having met with a serious accident in his youth, which so impaired his health that he was unable to endure the labor of the farm, and as the failure of health seemed permanent, his inclination was to a profession. Being impressed with the educational wants of the country at that time, he prepared himself for a teacher, which vocation he followed most successfully until his health gave way and he was compelled to seek out-of-door employment.

As a teacher, it was usual for him to instruct classes of young men in the higher branches of education, with a special regard to their chosen pursuit of life, selecting their studies accordingly.

During these years, he had his own methods in the use of textbooks, adopting original plans whenever he considered the books defective. From his long experience as a teacher, he became convinced that an improved speller was needed; consequently the Columbian Spelling Book was written and published, of which he was the author.

This book was considered a great improvement on any previously published. It contained many useful tables and other matter not embodied in similar works, and was very generally used in Central New York.

About the time he was compelled to leave the school room the Erie Canal was completed. This was the great event of the times, and he, with many others, engaged in the transportation business, which he followed until his last sickness. In all his business transactions he was noted for his promptitude and fidelity.

He moved from Berlin to Springfield, Otsego Co., N.Y. in 1823; to Frankfort, the same county, in 1828, and from thence to Palmyra, Wayne Co., N.Y. in the spring of 1832, where he died 14 Nov. 1836.

Note: Reverend Abel Leonard Crandall, born in Thetford, Vt. 1 Sept. 1787; d. in Willett, N.Y. on 3 Oct. 1855; he moved from Thetford, Vt. eerly in life to Champion, N.Y. Jefferson Co. where et the age of 19 yrs. he became a eubject of Devine Grace and united with the Congregational Church of that place, then under the care of Reverend Mr. Dutton. After long and savars struggles, he resolved to devote his life to the sacred ministry and began a course of study, preparatory under the joint cere of Reverend Dutton and Reverend Mr. Speer of Rodman. Ha was licenced to preach the Gospel in 1822, by the Black River Association. His first labors were in Denmark, Lewis Co. where he spent two years as a Licentiata. He received a call to Smithville, in the town of Adams, Jefferson Co. which he accented and was ordained about the time of those glorious revivals which were enjoyed in Jefferson Co. Lewis Co. and Onaida Co. 1824 to 1830. He drank deeply into the spirit of those glorious revivals and was eminently useful as a pastor in the churches of Smithville, Copenhagen, Denmark, Stoor's Square and Antwerp, where there we-a precious works under his Ministry. During his labors in Jefferson and Lewis Counties, he was often called upon to essist his brethern in the Ministry in revivals and was an efficien helper et such timas. Brother Crandell also labored as a stated supply with the Churches of Warrensburgh, Werren Co. Bethel Church, West Troy, the Church of Chatham, Columbia Co. the Congregational Church of Alford, Mass;, the Salisbury Church, Herkimer Co. Stockbridge Madison Co., closing his labors with a Ministry of nearly two years at Willett, Cortland Co.

From the commencement of his ministry, he sought out the faeble churches and was eminently adapted to build in the faith and order of the Gospel of Christ. In hi m, the temperance and enti-slavery causes found en early and warm friend. He loved the souls of his fallowman and was ever reedy to praach the Gospal to einners. Though in some ways, eccentric, he was a great lover of order and sound doctrina. He possessed a clear knowledge of the Holy Scriptures and has published an "Exposition of the Book of Revelations" that shows him to have bean a man of much study end independent thought.

He had a remarkable physical constitution and had never been detained from but one appointment by sickness during his ministry. His last sermon was preached under circumstances of great bodily prostration, but with unwonted fervor. Shortly after he was attacked with typhus fever, from which other members of his family were suffering and which in four weeks dissolved the "Earthly House" of his tabernacle and permitted him to "enter an house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens". During his long sickness, he was in the enjoyment of his mental powers and when asked by a brother in the ministry how he felt in view of the changing scene, he replied, "Not a cloud". His end was peace. He had emphatically rested from his labors and his works had followed in the hundreds, he was turned to righteousness. His funeral was attended on the 4th ult. by a weeping congregation and an affected church and family who listened with solemn interest to a sermon preached by the Reverend E. B. Sherwood of Pitcher, from first Thessalonians, 4:13-18. Well may we inquire in the language of one of Old: The fethers, whera are they? and the prophets do not live foraver. - The Evangelist.-

Note: The writer has had much correspondence with Mr. Davis in regard to Crandall date and received many records from him; he required a small fee of $5.00 which was paid for any line he was able to connect, at one time back in 1904, the writer received his first letter from Mr. Davis asking for his family records which were immediately sent to him and for this favor, Mr. Davis rewarded by sending his direct line back to Elder John Crandall; it was at this time and with this information that he began working on the Crandall records with the result that we now have a reasonably complete genealogy. Mr. Davis once wrote that he began his search for records at the age of 18 years. He and the late Professor Albert Rogers Crandall of Alfred University worked together and exchanged data all of which has been loaned by Miss Alberte Crandall, dau. of Professor A. R. Crandall, Milton, Wisc. to the writer and has been a great source of information without which this work would not have been so complete. Many thanks to Miss Crandall.

Ref. The writer called to interview Mrs. Addie (Crandall) Green, dau. of Wm. Henry Harrison Crandall, when she was about 90 years old and confined to the Cortland Co. Home suffering from a broken hip. The attendants said she could remember nothing, but found her memory was clear and she talked of the things that happened when she was a girl. She said that her family was all buried way back on top of a hill between E. Homer and Homer and was marked by a tall pine tree. After talking with many old residents of that section, they all agreed she was out of her mind and what she had told was of no value. However, after 5 years, while visiting the cemetery at Homer, the attendant said that while hunting he had come across an old cemetery back upon the hill. Search was made and finally found the exact spot where still stood the tall pine tree and there found the markers of Elias, Avery and a few others of that family, exactly as she described it. She also said that her mother died at the age of 38 when she (Addie) was 13 years old; that Avery had a dau., Mariette, who married Peter Van Slyke; that James married first Dorcas Harvey and 2nd Irene Bennett and gave all the names of James' children, including her uncle Rev. Andrew Jackson Crandall, so it is believed every word she told was authentic and factual. She was a school teacher when a young lady.

Subject Matter With Affidavit Following.

Subject: Desc. of Eld. John Crandall, who landed in Boston about 1635 and then settled in Providence Plantation and was companion of Roger Williams; this descendant in question (1st word opening this paragraph who married Ann Maria Harrington at Cedar Falls, Wisconsin 23 Aug. 1862).

Jackson Phillip Crandall
 (Ann Maria Harrington (Married at Cedar Falls, Wis. 23 Aug. 1862).

STATE OF OREGON,)
 COUNTY OF WASHINGTON } ss.

I, L. A. Long, being first duly sworn, depose and say: That I am the son of Jackson Phillip Long, who married my mother at Cedar Falls, Wisconsin, Aug. 23, 1862, her name being Ann Maria Harrington. I depose and swear that his elder brother Kenyon Crandall lived in my household 22 years and that he corroborated what Jackson Philip Long had told me in 1886, that he, Jackson Philip, had told him in 1871 that in 1857 he had legally changed his name from Crandall to Long because of a family difference; I further swear that the said Jackson Philip Crandall Long was a member of Co. G., 16th U.S. Volunteers, and that he was shot through the right knee in the first days of battle, and was hospitalized at Cincinnati, O. shortly before his marriage to my mother at Cedar Falls, Wisconsin. That my mother knew nothing about his name being Crandall until in the year of 1907. That their descendants were 16 children, of whom survive the following:

L. A. Long, Hillsboro, Oregon
 Kenyon F. Long, Williston, Mont.
 Emily Madeline Fayerweather, Downsville, Wis.
 Clifford York Long, Downsville, Wis.
 Mrs. Ruby Damon, Vancouver, Wash.
 Mrs. Geneva Erickson, Vancouver, Wash.

The aforesaid Kenyon Crandall (now deceased), told me that one branch of the Peter Crandall family moved to the Adirondack Mountains, 17 miles from Troy, N. Y., and that his grandfather advised him that his forbears in county always told him Rhode Island stories and that all his people talked of the old-time residents of Rhode Island. The affiant herein further swears that Roek Flint, who was Editor of the Dunn County News, told this affiant he was with Jackson Philip Long when he changed his name from Crandall to Long in Dane County, Wisconsin. The affiant, L. A. Long, further deposes and swears that he has been Editor five years in the State of Washington, and edited a newspaper in Hillsboro, Oregon 30 years, and Associated Press Correspondent for 25 years; and that he is now the bailiff in the Ct. Ct.
 for Washington County, and is aged 78 years and 22 days.

(signed) L. A. Long

 3d day of July, 1945.

Jan. 23, 1899. Ira Crandall engaged a man named Bouton, who at times had been considered insane, to split wood for him. Mr. Crandall was in the house when his attention was attracted by hearing singing and shouting. The old gentleman, who was nearly blind, made his way to the wood pile and asked what was the matter. Bouton started for him with the axe. Mr. Crandall made an effort to get to the house, but was overtaken by the maniac who sunk the blade of the axe deep into his head and then standing over his victim chopped his head to pieces. TOWN CLERK'S OFFICE

PIERREPONT, N. Y.

NATHAN A. JUDD, CLERK

CANTON, N. Y., R. F. D. 4

May 22 1947

Mr. J. C. Crandall
New Woodstock, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Crandall:-

Your letter in re- the Crandall family received yesterday and I have looked over the records in my office and have written on separate sheets what I could find and it may or may not be of any interest to you.

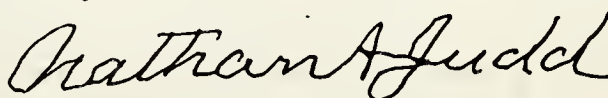

I have known of this family since my earliest memory but was not intimately acquainted with any of them except your Father and your Uncle Chester, having worked with both of them at Carpenter work, and also I remember them when they used to play ball. As I remember it your Father was the first man in this section who threw what we then called "an underhand throw" with the hand passing below the hip. As I also remember they used to go rather swift and straight and Chester was behind the bat to get them. They were considered at that time a pretty hot battery. All others at that time just simply tossed or pitched the ball with not much speed.

I do not have any records of the Towner Family. I knew Stillman and Judson well and the Harriett you speak of as having married John Seys Judd I also knew as John Seys was my Uncle. My Father's youngest brother but they went away from here when I was quite young. Aunt Hat and Reta visited here around 35 years ago and a son Arthur was here around 40 years ago but they are all gone now.

Yes I am somewhat younger than your Father as he was a young man when I was just a School boy but I am no spring chicken now having passed my 82 birth day last Dec. 27th. I have been pretty good up until about April 1st. and since then I have not been able to do much but I am beginning to feel a little better now and if we can get as much good weather as we have had bad I think I will pull through.

I am not making any charges for what I am sending you as it may not amount to a cents benefit to you but if it does I am only too glad to help you out,

Very truly yours

Town Clerk

NOTE: Enoch P. Crandall, like many other boys of his time, joined the prospectors in the gold rush days of the forty-nines and went by boat to the Isthmus of Panama, landing at the Shagrus River, which they followed then by foot over the trackless forest jungle to the Pacific. He related that on the way across the isthmus about half of the number perished of fever and insect bites. He arrived in California after a long and hazardous journey, but found the treasures he was seeking, bringing home some of the precious metals with which he purchased his homestead. While in the gold fields one day one of this brothers, Orin Crandall, walked in to camp. Neither one knew the other was within thousands of miles of that section. That night Orin spied an indian peeking out from behind a tree and told Enoch they were leaving. Although Enoch protested, Orin had his way and when returning to camp the following morning, found the place had been burned and the bodies of the other members of the camp lying on the ground. Orin suggested they break for home by going "cross lots" on foot to their home in upper New York State, but Enoch refused and took the long trip around the Horn. Orin took to the open fields only to arrive home ahead of Enoch.

1384 ALBERT CRANDALL, of Pierrepont, N.Y., son of John and Lucy (Howard) Crandall, b. West Pierrepont, N.Y. 12 Apr. 1835 (a twin of Alma);
 d. Pierrepont, N.Y. 1 Feb. 1862; m. at Russell, N.Y. 2 Oct. 1859 by Rev. H. M. Danforth of the M. E. Church, to Juliette Lawrence, b. 2 Jan. 1836;
 d. 20 May 1898. He owned the place at Brown's Corners on the right between Brown's Corners and Langdon's Corners on the Canton to Pierrepont

Albert was of unusual strength. He was holding a whole skidway of logs when one of the top logs broke loose and not being able to let go of the lever for fear of being buried, was hit by the falling log and fatally injured. Not being able to work and knowing he had not long to live, he went west to visit one of his brothers. Suddenly he became worse, and came back home where he lived but a short time. His widow married again on 16 Dec. 1862 to David Thomas of Parishville, N.Y.
 They had a son, Albert Hiram, who died in 1899.
 He married Jennie --, b. Nov. 1869, now living RFD #2, Colton, N.Y. The writer, while searching for pictures of his uncles, finally made a trip to the locality and after making inquiries, was told by George Brown of Brown's Corners about Mrs. Thomas. He immediately wrote to her and she sent a picture of Albert Crandall, which was taken when he was married and had been preserved in a small locket and although 85 years old, was as perfect as when taken. Many thanks to Mrs.
 Thomas.

1386 ORRIN S. CRANDALL, son of John and Lucy (Howard) Crandall, b. 5 July 1837.

Orrin was naturally of a roving disposition and when not of age went to Boston where he signed up for three years on a whaling vessel. This took him on a long voyage down around Cape Horn and into the Pacific Ocean out west off the coast of California. His Captain was very cruel and of the pirate class of seamen. Orrin had a mind of his own and resented some of the treacherous treatment from his superior. Orrin was the chief harpooner, a task which required daring and steel nerves of which he had plenty. One day while cruising near some small island in the Pacific, Orrin was placed in chains for some altercation with the Captain. He had plenty of friends among the sailors and they cut the chains, but Orrin remained as usual until after dark. He then jumped overboard and swam to an uninhabited island. He related that he was so exhausted that when he would get close to the shore the waves would carry him back. He finally decided to give up the ghost, then he thought of his poor mother so far away who would be always looking for her son. He made a super-human effort and was washed ashore where he lay for a long time completely overcome by his tragic experience. The next morning the Captain discovered his absence and turned back to find him, knowing this island was the only place where he could escape. The crew all came ashore but Orrin was elusive enough to escape their search and finally they took to ship in despair. Orrin remained on this lonely island for three weeks until one day a ship hove in sight and by the smoke of this fire were attracted to the rescue. He was landed in California during the gold rush days so decided to make for the gold fields, where unknowingly he came upon a brother, Enoch, who had made the trip across the Isthmus of Panama and was in the mountains in search of the precious metal. After each had made their fortune, Orrin suggested to Enoch that they go cross-lots home, but Enoch knowing how hazardous this would be took the long route home by the way of Cape Horn. Orrin started foot across the U.S. for home, and after many months arrived home in Pierrepont, St. Lawrence Co. N.Y., long before Enoch arrived. Orrin heard of a place in New York City where he could get rid of his gold so went there and traded his gold for jewelry which turned out to be only imitation of gold, so was cheated out of all his hard earned nuggets. Not discouraged by this, he started for Montana again where he served under General Fremont on his survey of the Great West. He finally joined a band of gold hunters and when returning with his load, he and one companion were killed by the Indians near Boseman, Montana in 1861. His skull was found and the teeth were sent to Canton, N.Y.

where they were identified by his dentist.

Merritt Warren Crandall, in the summer of 1863, enlisted in the 79th regiment New York Infantry and went to the civil war. He was in General Grant's army of the Potomac. In May 1864 Grant crossed the Rapidan into Virginia. Merritt was in three major battles; The Wilderness, Spottsylvania Courthouse and Cold Harbor. On 18 Aug. 1864 he was taken prisoner by the Confederates at The Weldon Railroad near Petersburg, Va. The next seven months he spent in Confederate prisons, first at Belle Island, Libby, Salisbury stockade and Florence. He told of great privations and starvation. Often when the wagons rolled in each morning to carry out those who had died during the night, he would take the grub cards from the dead and in this way get an extra ration of corn bread. Only in this way was he able to survive. He reduced in weight from 190 lbs. to 90 lbs. He was exchanged and entered the hospital at Annapolis, Md. and on recovery was given an honorable discharge and returned to his home in St. Lawrence Co. N.Y. In the summer of 1869 he moved to southern Mich. near Kalamazoo where he ran a grocery store until 1872. He then sold out and returned to Pierrepont, N.Y. where he purchased a farm on the road from the Beech Plains church to the Howard school house and farmed for the next 20 years. He then retired and lived in Canton and Potsdam villages where his son, Eugene, graduated from the Theological school at St. Lawrence son of John and Lucy (Howard) Crandall, b. W. Pierrepont 1846; d. 30 Sept. 1864 in Philadelphia, Pa.

John F. was not old enough when the war broke out so three or four times took the chance on the draft wheel for $300 each before he was finally called or enlisted. (The writer had this record from the Adjutant at Washington but it has been lost). John F. was taken ill while in the service and sent home on furlough. He was examined every 30 days and the report sent in to the government, but the last time the old doctor at Crary's Mills, South Canton, N.Y., neglected to send in his report and the officers came after John, who had just started over to the sugar bush with the dinners for his father and two brothers. (one brother, Lester, was the father of the writer). When the officers called "halt", looking back John saw who they were and started to run over the ledges. He received a warning shot so gave up. The officers would not let him even stop at the house to say good bye to his mother. He was in such poor health that the officers left him at the hospital in Philadelphia, Pa., but he never recovered. When he saw that he could not live he had his picture taken to send back to his mother. He soon died and was first buried in the Odd Fellows Cemetery then later his remains were taken to the National Cemetery in Philadelphia, Pa. (He was another uncle of the writer who has the picture mentioned). Enlisted as a substitute at Rochester, N.Y. 5 Aug. 1863, Co. K., 64th N.Y. Inf., transferred to Co. G. N.Y. Inf.; d. Islington Hospital, Phila., Pa. 24 Feb. 1865 (Adj. Gen. Office, Washington, D.C.)

Chester A. Crandall had the misfortune of being born with the asthma which was a source of annoyance and hardship his entire life. He served as constable of the town of Pierrepont and was a carpenter and contractor, leaving many monuments in the form of large barns and houses throughout that section of the county where he lived all his life. He attended Potsdam Normal school and was prominent in his younger days as a ball player. He was the catcher while his twin brother, Lester A., did the throwing. No gloves were used in those days and it has been said that smoke could be seen coming from his hands when he would pick the fast ones from behind the bat.

Lester A. Crandall spent his boyhood days at the old homestead with his twin brother, helping their father with the farm. He attended the little red school house at Northrup's corner. One of his school mates was the celebrated author of north country tales, Irving Bacheller. Lester was a strong robust man six foot tall and weighed over 200 pounds. Soon after marriage they started keeping house in the Dan Smead place at Crary Mills, he was 20 and his bride only 15 years old. Their first son was born here, they they moved to the log cabin owned by her father where the 2nd child was born. They moved from there to the old Crandall homestead, after the death of his father, where the next two girls and the writer were born. From there they moved to the Anderson place, between Northrup's Corner and Brown's Corners; their next move being to the Leonard Place at Crary Mills where the 6th child was born. The following spring they moved back on the plains on the road from Coons Corners to the Beech Plains church where the last child was born. In 1893 they moved to Canton where they lived the rest of their lives, owning several places in Canton. Mr. Crandall was a carpenter and builder. While living in Pierrepont he built as many as 40 large hip-roofed barns all through St. Lawrence Co., which are to this day monuments of his skill and workmanship. He also built many fine houses which bear witness of this craftsmanship. He served as tax collector of Pierrepont. While in Canton, in company with Frank Gardner, who married his niece Emma Hewitt, he continued his trade of building such fine residences as those of Prof. Priest, Prof. Foster, Prof. Ford, W. N. Beard, Rev. Payson, the Catholic Parsonage and the Gymnasium at St. Lawrence University. Another sample of his workmanship may be seen in the winding staircase in the old St. Lawrence University building. Retiring from the trade, he opened a little grocery in his home at the corner of Court and State Streets. After a few years he sold this and went to St. Cloud, Fla. where he bought a place and spent the last six or seven winters with his wife, driving his own car. While here he visited Irving Bacheller at his fine home in Winter Park, Fla., spending the better part of the day swapping stories about the events of their boyhood, including the popular wrestling matches. Mr. Bacheller related how Lester won the coveted belt at Pierrepont Center back in 1870.

Towner Genealogy A.D. 1686-1910

Richard Towner, came from Sussex County England and settled in the town of Guilford, Conn., on or about 17 Feb. 1686. There is a grant of land of that date on the record of the town meeting, page 10, though the grant was not put on the land records until 2 May 1712, when the town ordered it to be recorded as ten acres "formerly granted to Richard Towner, now living in Branford" marked at the corners by stones graven with the letters "R.T." He lived in Guilford three years and then removed to Branford where there is a record of him in 1689. From whence he emigrated to this country has not been ascertained with certainty. The Towner family has been living in Sussex County for generations and no where else.

In the southeast part of Branford, Conn. there is a swamp and at the beach a cave in the rocks, which have long been known as Towners swamp and Towners Cave. The grant made to him in Guilford apparently includes this swamp and it is conjectured that for some reason he lived for a while in this cave, but he first settled on Towners Hill and the following year built a house at a place 3 miles East known as Short Rocks and put down a well. Traces of the cellar wall of the house and of the well are still to be seen there and are identified by decendants of his living in Branford.

A tradition related in the towns of Oxford, Haddam, and Killingworth, Conn. by decendants of Richard is that he was impressed in the British Navy from the Isle of Man and that after some years service on the American coast, he was put ashore at Savannah, Ga. to die of yellow fever, but recovered and married his nurse. With her he went to Charlestown, S.C. and engaged in the grocery business. Afterwards in order to escape a threatened bombardment by a Spanish Man-of-war, he and others provisioning a small vessel from his store, sailed for the north and landed on the shore of Conn., settling at Branford.

In Bradford Co. Pa. a tradition exists among the decendants of Elijah who settled in that county that five brothers came together from England; that two of them, Richard and Abraham, settled in Conn. and the others, Gershom, Enoch and Daniel, in Steuben Co. N.Y., Nova Scotia, and Virginia, respectively.

There is reason for believing that this tradition has foundation in fact except as to Abraham.

Richard and Abraham could not have been brothers. Abraham was born seventy-five to eighty years later than Richard and was nearer the age of his grandson (see Pineas Towner, son of John 2nd, son of Richard, page 23).

The date of Richard's birth is unknown. However, in his will made in 1725 he speaks of himself as aged and weak in body and his birth was probably 1650 or earlier. Neither is the name of his first wife certainly known, but there is a Mary Towner on the church records who likely was his wife. In the will his wife was called Deborah but she was his 2nd wife, Deborah Crane, who he married in Haddam, Mar. 6, 1716-7.

The original town records of Branford still exist and are well preserved in Vol. 2, page 56 of date 27 May 1689; as follows:

The Town has given to Richard Towner 12 acres of land lying upon the Hill that is situated eastward from the brook that is called Beaver Brook, and lying eastward from the highway that runs by Thomas and Nathaniel Harrison's field unto Jno.

Butler and John Swain's field near the head of the Furnace Pond; which 12 acres is granted with this proviso, that he the said Richard Towner do build a tenantable house upon that land and settle upon it within 6 years from the date hereof otherwise to return to the Town again. And Mr. William Maltbye and John Frissbe and John Butler appointed to lay it out. The location is now known as Towners Hill, before mentioned.

At page 62 dated 8 April 1690, is this: The Town has agreed to exchange with Richard Towner viz; the town has given unto him 14 acres of land joining or near the land of Bartholomew Goodrich lying upon the old Mill Brook provided he do relinquish and resign up unto the Town the 12 acres the town formerly granted to him near Thomas and Nath'll Harrison's field always provided that he do build upon and improve it according to the former injunction upon the first grant and John Frisbee, Bartholomew Goodrich and John Butler are appointed to lay out the above 14 acres.

He became a land owner also in Haddam, one of his sons, Benjamin, having settled there. In the town records of Haddam is a deed from Richard Towner of Branford to my son Benjamin Towner of Haddam consideration 30 pounds, date 31 Dec. 1723.

In confirmation of all and every part of ye above instrument I have hereto set my hand and affixed my seal this first day of May in the tenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George of Great Britain King Defender of the Faith, etc., etc. Annoque Domini 1724

The above was written after his will to his son Richard.

This deed has been preserved and is in the possession of the writer hereof. In 1882 he found it in the hands of Harriett Towner of Branford, a decendant of Richard, Jr. who kindly gave it to him. It is very well written and eligable.

He must have been a man of some dignity and character and entitled to respect for at a Branford town meeting, 2 Nov. 1692, the select men were instructed to "desire Richard Towner to have the oversight of the youth to keep them from playing during the exercises of worship".

The Branford record of births, deaths, etc. says Richard Towner, Sr. departed this life 22 Aug. 1727.

He had 9 children, the dates of their births and deaths cannot all be given with certainty. The first three likely born in England. The record of baptisims is an indication that they were born in the order named: March 1700 baptism. Richard, Sarah, John, Joseph, Benjamin, Samuel and Hannah Towner.

Note: Lathan Crandall was but an infant when his father moved his family into the sparsely settled section of Central New York; settling in Plymouth township, Chenango Co. Like his father, he became a skilled stone workman. He also spent many years as a successful farmer. He and three of his brothers had the distinction of selecting four Aldrich sisters as their wives. Of these four marriages, forty-nine children (double cousins) were born. For a further description of this outstanding life, we quote from his grandson, Reverend George B. Benedict in a tribute on the occasion of the eightieth birthday celebration 4 Feb. 1890. - "Lathan Crandall belongs to that class of men who laid low the primeval forests and bared the hills and valleys of this region to the productive kiss of the sunlight." He has been a thorough man; he farming was carefully and neatly done; he mason work was done upon honor; there was something besides brick and stone and mortar put into his walls.

His life was symmetrical; in young manhood, he became a Christian; identified himself with religious work as a layman and has been a Methodist all his Christian life serving his Church as class leader; he conducted a Sabbath morning class in the Methodist Church, Norwich, N.Y. His long life was one of manual labor and not free from cares, anxieties and trouble, but the consolations of religion have helped him bear them all. His life is proof that faith and trust in God ten to longevity.

Note: Doctor Edward Francis Crandall d. in Pike Bradford Co. Pa. 20 Mar. 1863, age 57 years and 14 days; Perhaps no man in the ordinary walks of life was more widely known in this and the neighboring counties than Doctor Crandall and he needed only to be known to be loved. He was b. in Trumansburg, Tompkins Co. N.Y. and early exhibited an extraordinary degree of determination in the pursuit of his studies; Thirty-eight years ago, at the very early age of nineteen, he commenced the practice of medicine in Luzerne Co. In this State, six years afterwards, he removed to this county where he has resided ever since. Having been compelled by continued ill health to give up the practice, this winter, he secured a clerkship in Washington but remained there only a month. His anxiety for his family and his country, his broken down condition and his unceasing attendance at the bedside of his nephew, Norvell W. Jones in his last illness, all combined to render him an early prey to the same fearful disease, typhoid fever. As soon as he felt himself becoming ill, he started for home, feeling that it was his last sickness; he survived only nine days after reaching home. His whole life was spent in studying how he could most benefit his fellow man. Remarkably successful in his profession, he always remembered the intimate relations of health of the mind and the body and considered that his task was but half done when he had alleviated physical pain. He was the skillful physician, the kind and gentle nurse, the thoughtful friend and councillor. The church on earth has lost a consistent and active member. Society is deprived of one of its greatest ornaments. The sick and suffering have met with an unpeakable loss, and he will be remembered and mourned by all who knew him well.

Note: From "History of Windham County" - Miss Crandall's Schools - White and colored. Canterbury in danger. Excitement. Expulsion.

The advent of the Temperance Reform was contemporary with another great popular agitation in which Windham County took a very different position, and the town most active and prominent in temperance effort especially signalized itself by its most bitter and determined opposition to the Anti-slavery movement. Canterbury was a very influential town at this period, and was particularly noted for the public spirit and high character of its leading men, and its cultivated and agreeable society. Andrew T. Judson, State attorney and successful lawyer, Dr. Harris, the skillful surgeon, Esquire Frost, the devoted champion of temperance, Rufus Adams, with his fund of dry humor, George S. White, with his strong character and multifarious knowledge, Luther Paine, John Francis, Thomas and Stephen Coit, Samuel L. Hough, all solid men interested in public affairs--had their homes at or near Canterbury Green, and gave tone and prominence to the town. Few country towns could boast such social attractions. Dr. Harris was one of the most genial and hospitable of men, and his new model house with its rare appendage of a conservatory and choice flower-garden, was the wonder of all the County. Mrs. Harris had inherited the social characteristics of her distinguished father, General Moses Cleveland, and received their unnumbered guests with all his ease and heartiness. A handsome new house had been also built by Mr. Judson, in which much company was entertained, although it was said that Mrs. Judson as a Windham lady assumed superiority over her neighbors. Her husband, who liked to rally her upon this weakness, once called her down to the parlor to receive a Windham visitor, and most blandly presented to her an intrusive frog, which had hopped into the hall. His own tact and courtesy made ample amends for his wife's reputed deficiencies. Pleasant familiar intercourse was maintained among the village residents. All united with uncommon unanimity in plans for village improvement and public benefit, and it was in carrying out one of these projects that they struck upon the rock which foundered them. The school question was one in which Canterbury felt great interest. Her young people sought education at home or abroad, and an unusual number of young girls then growing up in the village families awakened parental solicitude. The proposition of Miss Prudence Crandall to open a young ladies' boarding-school at Canterbury Green was received with much favor. A large house left vacant by the death of Esquire Paine was secured for her, and in the autumn of 1831 the school was opened under the most favorable auspices. A goodly number of young ladies from the best families in town were enrolled as pupils. Messrs. Judson, Harris, Frost, Adams, Hough, Packer, Kinne, and Reverend Dennis Platt, were constituted a board of visitors, and bore most flattering testimony to the character of the school and the ability of its teacher. The cordiality and friendliness of her reception were gratefully acknowledged by Miss Crandall, her relations with pupils and patrons was most agreeable and harmonious, and it seemed likely that this much-needed institution would become permanently established. Circulars were sent out commending it to public patronage, scholars came from neighboring towns and even from distant cities, and everything was going on pleasantly and prosperously when--a crash came. Without premonition or warning, before the patrons of the school had dreamed of any real danger, a new element had been introduced, a change of base effected, and their daughters dismissed from school to make way for negroes! Was it strange that the community should flame out in indignation? The causes that led to this revolution are thus detailed by Miss Crandall:-

"The reason for changing my school of white pupils for a school for colored pupils is as follows: I had a nice colored girl, now Mrs. Charles Harris, as help in my family; and her intended husband regularly received The Liberator. The girl took the paper from the office and loaned it to me. In that the condition of the colored people both slaves and free was truthfully portrayed, the double-dealing and manifest deception of the Colonization Society were faithfully exposed, and the question of Immediate Emancipation of the millions of slaves in the United States boldly advocated. Having been taught from early childhood the sin of Slavery, my sympathies were greatly aroused. Sarah Harris, a respectable young woman and a member of the church (now Mrs. Fairweather, and sister to the before-named intended husband), called often to see her friend Marcia, my family assistant. In some of her calls I ascertained that she wished to attend my school and board at her own father's house at some little distance from the village. I allowed her to enter as one of my pupils. By this act I gave great offence. The wife of an Episcopal clergyman who lived in the village told me that if I continued that colored girl in my school it could not be sustained. I replied to her, That it might sink, then, for I should not turn her out! I very soon found that some of my school would leave not to return if the colored girl was retained. Under these circumstances I made up my mind that if it were possible I would teach colored girls exclusively. I made the attempt, and the result is before the public." (From a Private Letter, May 15, 1869.)

Before acting upon this decision, Miss Crandall consulted with leading Abolitionists in Boston and New York, who gladly pledged their cooperation and assistance. Had she also consulted her generous friends and patrons in Canterbury, or even given them notice of her intentions, they would have had less ground of complaint, but their indignation when the proposed change in the complexion of the school was suddenly announced to them was greatly heightened by what they deemed an inexcusable breach of good faith in one they had so encouraged and befriended. As soon as the young ladies took to their several homes the news of their dismissal to make room "for young ladies and little misses of color," Messrs. Rufus Adams, Frost, Fenner and Harris visited Miss Crandall and endeavored to persuade her "to give up her project so far as Canterbury was concerned," but found all argument and persuasion useless. Having made up her mind to this step from a clear conviction of her duty to the colored race, nothing could change her. The people of Canterbury saw to their supreme horror and consternation that this popular school in which they had taken so much pride was to be superseded by something so anomalous and phenomenal that it could hardly be comprehended. A public meeting of citizens was at once called and the previous visitors delegated to convey their sentiments and wishes to Miss Crandall. They found her as before, firm as a rock. Esquire Frost, as spokesman of the committee, "in a most kind and affecting manner" labored to convince her of the impropriety and injustice of the proposed measure, and delicately hinted at the danger that might ensue from "these leveling principles and intermarriage between the whites and blacks." "Moses had a black wife," bluntly replied the lady, opening to the prophetic eye dark visions of forthcoming amalgamation and disorder. Reports of these unsatisfactory interviews increased the pervading excitement to actual frenzy. The people of the town with scarce an exception were united in horrified antipathy to the colored school and a determination to prevent its opening. South of Dixie's line, Judge Lynch would have probably soon have settled the matter, but this Connecticut town knew no better way to accomplish its purpose than by the familiar agency of a town-meeting hastily summoned, "to devise and adopt such measures as would effectually avert the nuisance, or speedily abate it if it should be brought into the village." This meeting was held March 9, 1833. It was a very memorable occasion. Reports of the proceedings in Canterbury, now noised far and wide, brought many from other towns to the scene of action. Mr. Samuel J. May, who drove over with Mr. Benson from Brooklyn to aid and support Miss Crandall, found the village in furious excitement, and was warned of personal danger, but the lady who had excited all this commotion was still "resolved and tranquil." By the advice of Mr. May and Arnold Buffum--agent of the Anti-slavery Society who had also come to the rescue--Miss Crandall consented to remove her school to some less public part of the town if her opponents would take her house and cease to molest her. Armed with this proposal and power to negotiate a compromise, Messrs. May and Buffum repaired to the meeting-house at the hour appointed, and with difficulty made their way through the crowded aisle to a seat near the moderator. A strange spectacle greeted them--the great house filled to its utmost capacity with hundreds of anxious, angry citizens intent to devise some scheme of escape from the crushing calamity of "a school of nigger girls." The "prodigious descent of devils" record by Cotton Mather could not have inspired more preternatural dread and horror. After the reading of the warning by the moderator, Judge Adams offered the following resolutions:-

"Whereas, it hath been publicly announced that a school is to be opened in this town, on the first Monday of April next, using the language of the advertisement, "for young ladies and little misses of color," or in other words for the people of color, the obvious tendency of which would be to collect within the town of Canterbury large numbers of persons from other States whose characters and habits might be various and unknown to us, thereby rendering insecure the persons, property and reputations of our citizens. Under such circumstances our silence might be construed into an approbation of the project;

Thereup, Resolved, That the locality of a school for the people of color at any place within the limits of this town, for the admission of persons of foreign jurisdiction, meets with our unqualified disapprobation, and it is to be understood, that the inhabitants of Canterbury protest against it in the most earnest manner.

Resolved, That a committee be now appointed, to be composed of the Civil Authority and Selectmen, who shall make known to the person contemplating the establishment of said school, the sentiments and objections entertained by this meeting in reference to said school--pointing out to her the injurious effects and incalculable evils resulting from such an establishment within this town, and persuade her to abandon the project."

Messrs. Adams and Judson supported these resolutions with great earnestness and vehemence, filling their hearers "with the apprehension that a dire calamity was impending over them. that Miss Crandall was the author or instrument of it; that there were powerful conspirators engaged with her in the plot; and that the people of Canterbury should be roused by every consideration of self-preservation as well as self-respect to prevent the accomplishment of the design." Others with much warmth urged the resolutions; but Mr. George S. White, who alone attempted to oppose them, was frequently interrupted by calls to order, and his proposal to assist in the purchase of Miss Crandall's house received no attention. Messrs. May and Buffum then stepped forward with Miss Crandall's letter, authorizing them to speak and act in her behalf, whereupon Mr. Judson broke forth with greater violence than before, accusing them of insulting the town by this interference, while other excited citizens gathered around them, and with "fists doubled in their faces" poured out tirades of wrath against Miss Crandall and her accomplices, threatening the utmost penalty of the law if they dared to open their lips, if not a more immediate vengeance. Thus effectually silenced the gentlemen sat down, and the resolutions were presented and passed by unanimous vote, but the instant of adjournment Mr. May sprang upon his seat and besought the audience to listen to a plain statement of the circumstances that had led Miss Crandall to take this step, and the true character of the proposed school. Mr. Buffum followed with a few impressive words upon the great question at issue and might have gained a hearing but the more violent leaders drove the people from the meeting-house with cries of "out," "out," and the society committee ordered the speakers to leave and closed the doors against them.

Five days after the meeting a formidable array of town officers presented the Resolutions "in a formal and becoming manner," and earnestly besought Miss Crandall to relinquish her scheme, "responsible individuals offering and urging upon her the sum she had paid for the house upon condition that she would abandon the proposed school." This she positively declined though willing to remove to a less public location, and went on her way making preparation for her pupils, "with a firmness of design and a decision of action worthy the holiest cause." On the appointed day the school actually began. Some ten or twelve quiet, harmless little colored girls or young ladies, from the very best colored families in the Northern cities, had found their way to Canterbury, and were receiving instruction from Miss Crandall. If the Canterbury people had quietly accepted the situation and left them in peace the difficulty would soon have ended. Even if the children had remained they would have given them little annoyance. Twenty Indian lads were received into Plainfield Academy a few years later, and few outside the village had ever heard of them. But such submission at that date was entirely out of the question. The sudden outburst of the Abolition movement and the unscrupulous audacity of its leaders had frightened people out of their senses. The Crandall school was an outgrowth of Abolitionism. At a later town meeting it was placed on record, "That the establishment or rendezvous falsely denominated a school was designed by its projectors as the theatre, as the place to promulgate their disgusting doctrines of amalgamation, and their pernicious sentiments of subverting the Union. Their pupils were to have been congregated here from all quarters under the false pretence of educating them, but really to "scatter fire-brands, arrows and death among brethren of our own blood." With such suspicious and apprehensions it is not surprising that the people of Canterbury should use their utmost endeavors to suppress and crush out this obnoxious institution, especially, when to terror of Abolition aim and effort was added a sense of personal injury and a very natural desire "to have their own way." "Every argumentative effort" having failed them, they were forced to resort to other measures. The oft-read lesson in the spelling-book came home with peculiar emphasis--"When neither words nor grass would answer they were forced to try what virtue there was in stones." If these stones could have been thrown by lawful authority they would have much preferred it, but the legal State armory was wholly inadequate to the occasion, legislation in Connecticut having hitherto always aimed to build up schools and protect women and children. The old pauper and vagrant law was however passed into service and a warrant served upon Ann Eliza Hammond of Providence, warning her out of town unless her maintenance was guaranteed, "to be whipped on the naked body not exceeding ten stripes" in default of satisfaction or departure. Meanwhile Andrew T. Judson, William Lester, Chester Lyon, Rufus Adams, Solomon Paine, Andrew Harris, Ashael Bacon, George S. White, Daniel Packer and Isaac Backus, were appointed agents by the town to draw up and circulate a petition to be laid before the General Assembly, "detracting the evil consequences of bringing from other States and other towns people of color for any purpose, and more especially for the purpose of disseminating the principles and doctrines opposed to the benevolent colonizing system," and praying it to enact laws to prevent this evil. Inhabitants of other towns were also requested to prefer "petitions for the same laudable object." While waiting for legal power to break up the school, Canterbury did its best to make scholars and teacher uncomfortable. Non-intercourse and Embargo Acts were put in successful operation. Dealers in all sorts of wares and produce agreed to sell nothing to Miss Crandall, the stage-driver declined to carry her pupils, and neighbors refused a pail of fresh water, even though they knew that their own sons had filled her well with stable refuse. Boys and rowdies were allowed unchecked if not openly encouraged to exercise their utmost ingenuity in mischievous annoyance, throwing real stones and rotten eggs at the windows and following the school with hoots and horns if it ventured to appear in the street. Not only was Miss Crandall herself assailed with threats of coming vengeance and ejection, but her father in the south part of the town was insulted and threatened. "When lawyers, courts and jurors are leagued against you," said one to him, "it will be easy to raise a mob and tear down your house." Poor Mr. Crandall, the meekest of non-resistant Quakers, was greatly terrified by these warlike demonstrations and besought his daughter "to give up her school, sell her property and relieve Canterbury from their imagined destruction," but that high-spirited woman very kindly but positively declined to follow his suggestions. The calmness and fortitude with which she met this furious onslaught astonished her friends and exasperated her enemies. Her chief ally and supporter, Mr. May, always found her firm and tranquil, prepared for any emergency. Her father and an old Quaker brought them fresh water. Packerville dealers furnished household supplies, and a colored driver from Norwich took the school-girls back and forth, and accommodated Abolition visitors.

As soon as possible Canterbury's petition was brought before the Legislature. It was a difficult and delicate matter to legislate but Connecticut was equal to it. Public opinion strongly favored the petitioners. That peculiar rabies which had transformed the genial, jovial gentlemen of Canterbury into malicious persecutors was not confined to that town. "We should not want a nigger school on our common," was the universal sentiment and expression of every town in Windham County. Many towns in all parts of the State had seconded Canterbury's request and would have opposed the establishment of such a school with equal bitterness. Slavery was the unsolved problem in American destiny. The Abolitionist was the fuse thrown among combustibles and the great mass of the people shrank with dread from the inevitable explosion. The Legislators of Connecticut were fully persuaded of the necessity of closing this pernicious school, but did not see exactly how to accomplish it. Ninety years before when asked by the standing clergy and churches to devise some means for keeping out irregular preachers and itinerants, their predecessors had enacted that a Minister from out of the State preaching without the invitation of a stated Minister or society should be sent like a vagrant by warrant out of the bounds of the Colony, but the civilization of the nineteenth century eschewed this process as too summary and preferred to levy a tribute from the offender's pocket. After suitable discussion and deliberation it was enacted, "That no person should set up a school or educational institution for the instruction of colored persons who were not inhabitants of the State, nor instruct in such a school nor harbor or board any colored person instructed in such a school, without the consent in writing first obtained of a majority of the civil authority and selectmen in the town in which such school is situated under penalty of a fine of a hundred dollars for the first offence; two hundred for the second, and so double for every subsequent offence of which such person should be convicted." In vain did poor Mr. Crandall humbly entreat the Assembly, to remember these self-evident truths, that all mankind are created free and equal, and implore them "not to grant the prayer of any petition, nor pass any act that will curtail or destroy any of the rights of the free people of this State or other States whether they are white or black." "Mr. Crandall," said Mr. Judson afterwards, "when you sent your printed paper to the General Assembly, you did not injure us; it helped very much in getting the bill through. When they received it every man clinched his fist, and the chairman of the committee sat down and doubled the penalty. Members of the Legislature said to me--"If this law does not answer your purpose, let us know, and next year we will make you one that will."

The receipt of the legislative device for the relief of Canterbury was welcomed in that town by the ringing of bells, firing of cannon, and every demonstration of popular delight and triumph. A more orderly and systematic opposition was now enforced against the school. The new dispensation was thus promulgated in Mr. Crandall's household by two of the leading citizens:-

"Mr. Crandall, if you go to your daughter's you are to be fined $100, for the first offence; $200 for the second, and double it every time; Mrs. Crandall, if you go there, you will be fined and your daughter Almira will be fined, and Mr. May and those gentlemen from Providence (Messrs. George and Henry Benson), if they come there will be fined at the same rate. And your daughter, the one that established the school for colored females, will be taken up the same way as for stealing a horse, or for burglary. Her property will not be taken but she will be put in jail, not heaving the liberty of the yard. There is no mervy to be shown about it!".

But while this law encouraged Miss Crandall's enemies it increased the number and strengthened the determination of her friends and supporters. Among many letters of approval and sympathy addressed to Mr. May came one from Arthur Tappan, expressing his entire approbation of the course that had been pursued, encouraging Miss Crandall to maintain her position, and offering to bear all the forthcoming legal expenses. These friendly offers were followed by personal intercourse, giving great aid and comfort. Finding that the little band with all its heroism was almost overborne by the storm of abuse and invective, and especially by misrepresentations which they were not allowed to rectify, Mr. Tappan made immediate arrangements for the publication of a newspaper in Brooklyn, "to the advocacy of all human rights in general, and to the defence of the Canterbury school and its heroic teacher in particular." Mr. Charles C. Burleigh of Plainfield was secured as its editor, and under his able leadership the fiery little Unionist took the field and struck most telling blows for Miss Crandall and Abolitionism. Thus encouraged and supported Miss Crandall went calmly on with her school, unterrified by the threats and denunciations of her adversaries. Previous to this she had skillfully foiled their first legal approaches. On June 27, she had been summoned before Justice Adams on charge of violating a statute law of the State of Connecticut. Her counsel gave in a demurrer to the complaint, admitting the facts true, and submitted to the finding of the Court without argument. The sum needful to be pledged as surety for her appearance before the County Court for trial was named by the Court, but to the astonishment of her accusers no one appeared to give bonds for her, and they were forced to the disagreeable necessity of taking her to Brooklyn jail, to the very room occupied by Watkins the night preceding his execution. The result of this ingenious stroke of policy was far more favorable than had been anticipated by its projectors. Miss Crandall immured in the murderer's cell for the crime of teaching colored girls made a most vivid and startling impression upon the popular mind. Many who had before blamed her for disturbing the peace of Canterbury were shocked at this alleged outrage. An intrusive, troublesome woman was thus transformed into a martyr. It was in vain that her accusers protested that the imprisonment was entirely voluntary and nominal, the cell a good room furnished with every comfort, that a female friend passed the night with her and both were released the following day. The story of her unjust imprisonment was noised in every direction, and unquestionably had great influence in awakening sympathy in her behalf and strengthening anti-slavery sentiment.

The anger and mortification of the Canterbury leaders at having their weapons thus turned against them made them more bitter in opposition, and more zealous in preparation for the approaching legal contests. The first trial was held before the County Court, August 22. Jonathan A. Welch conducted the prosecution, aided by Andrew T. Judson and Ichabod Bulkley. Calvin Goddard, W. W. Ellsworth and Henry Strong appeared for the defence, retained by Mr. May at the expense of Mr. Arthur Tappan. The constitutionality of the law under which Miss Crandall was arraigned was the point at issue. It was claimed by the defence that this newly enacted law conflicted with that article of the Federal Constitution, which allowed to citizens of each State all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States. The prosecution denied that blacks were or could be citizens of any State. Both positions were defended with much ability and adroitness. In his charge to the jury Judge Eaton gave as his opinion, "that the law is constitutional and obligatory on the people of this State," but the jurors were unable to agree. In October, the case was tried before the Superior Court of Windham County upon the same grounds and with the same counsel. In an able and elaborate charge, Judge Daggett maintained the constitutionality of the law, and declared that to this mind "it would be a perversion of terms, and the well known rule of construction to say that slaves, free blacks or Indians, were citizens within the meaning of that term as used in the Constitution." His overpowering influence gained the verdict and judgment was pronounced against the defendant. Her counsel then appealed to the Court of Errors, before which tribunal a final trial was held July 22, 1834, when the arguments on both sides were reiterated with all possible ingenuity and eloquence. The Court reversed the decision of the Supreme Court upon the ground of "insufficiency of the information," which omitted to allege that the school was set up without the requisite license. The legal question as to the constitutionality of the law was thus left undecided.

During this period affairs in Canterbury had remained in the same vexed and unhappy condition, the opponents of the school waxing more impatient and violent, and teacher and scholars bearing indignity and annoyance with unchabated spirit and fortitude. So far as can be ascertained the school was well-sustained and prosperous. The pupils were docile, affectionate and studious, eager to improve their hardly-won advantages. William H. Burleigh and his sister assisted for a time as teachers, and it is their testimony as well as Miss Crandall's that these colored girls "made as good if not better progress than the same number of whites taken from the same position of life." Miss Crandall's sister Almira, was constantly with her and assisted in teaching, a very lovely, active and efficient young woman, "possessing a great heart, loving everybody and being loved by all." Storms might rage without the walls but all was peace and harmony within. They had like other scholars their "gale-days" and exhibition exercises. On one such occasion, called a Mental Feast, four of the youngest pupils dressed in white sang with great sweetness this story of their trials, composed by their teacher:-

"Four little children here you see,
In modest dress appear;
Come, listen to our song so sweet,
And our complaints you'll hear.

"Tis here we come to learn to read,
And write and cipher too;
But some in this enlightened land
Declare 'twill never do.

The morals of this favored town,
Will be corrupted soon,
Therefore they strive with all their might,
To drive us to our homes.

Sometimes when we have walked the streets
Saluted we have been,
By guns, and drums, and cow-bells too,
And horns of polished tin.

With warnings, threats and words severe
They visit us at times,
And gladly would they send us off
To Afric's burning climes.

Our teacher too they put in jail,
Fast held by bars and locks!
Did e'er such persecution reign
Since Paul was in the stocks?

But we forgive, forgive the men,
That persecute us so.
May God in mercy save their souls
From everlasting wo!"

As time went on they gained some outside sympathy. Esquire Frost and others who embraced anti-slavery principles, ceased to molest if they did not openly encourage. Debarred by public sentiment and the voice of the trustees from the Congregational house of worship, they found admission and friendly welcome among the Friends at Black Hill, and the Baptists at Packerville. Religious services in their own house were exposed to unseemly interruption, as when the Reverend Mr. Potter of Pawtucket was preaching, and a clamorous rabble assailed the house with volleys of rotten eggs and other missiles.

But however harmless and even praiseworthy the Canterbury school may have appeared to a dispassionate spectator, to the great majority of the people of the town it was the embodiment of all evil and blackness. When after all their efforts and months of wearisome delay the suit at law so eagerly prosecuted had come to naught, and all prospect of legal relief was indefinitely postponed, they felt that they could endure it no longer. Legally, if we can; forcibly, if we must--was the prevailing sentiment. One morning early in September, Miss Crandall's house was found to be on fire but the flames were more easily extinguished than the resultant controversy which like the constitutionality of the Black Law was never definitely decided. Miss Crandall and her friends insisted that from the position of the fire when first discovered it could not have been kindled from within, and her opponents were equally positive in maintaining that it could not have been done outside. A very respectable colored man from Norwich, who had been mending a clock in the room in which the fire broke out, was made the victim of popular vengeance. To his utter astonishment he was seized by a writ and brought before Judge Adams, and though the evidence against him was utterly trifling was committed for trial, the enemies of Miss Crandall insinuating that she had instigated this act as a pretext for abandoning the school which had become burdensome to her.

But while there were some who professed to believe that Miss Crandall had set fire to her house no one ever accused her of breaking in her own windows. This occurred September 9, 1834. It was late in the evening, the family was preparing for bed when a number of men armed with heavy iron bars stole noiselessly around the house and at a given signal simultaneously raised the bars, and with all the force they could muster beat and dashed in the windows. The suddenness and violence of the assault, and the exposure to which they were subjected, completely unnerved this household of defenceless women, and even Miss Crandall quailed at this manifestation of deadly hatred and unscrupulous ruffianism. After a night of sleepless agitation, Mr. May was summoned "to the scene of destruction and the terror-stricken family." A consultation was held. It was evident that Miss Crandall's enemies were bent upon breaking up the school. In the absence of any security against further assault it seemed useless and fool-hardy to prolong the unequal contest. Mr. May announced the decision to the trembling pupils, and as soon as possible they dispersed to their several homes. A short time before Miss Crandall had married Mr. Calvin Philleo, and as soon as she could dispose of her property and make needful arrangements, she too left Windham County forever. "Thus ended," says Mr. May, "the generous, disinterested, philanthropic Christian enterprise of Prudence Crandall."

Canterbury's exultation over its downfall was somewhat marred by the method of accomplishment. With the object probably of justifying her course in the eyes of coming generations, an elaborate "Preamble and Resolutions" was prepared the following year, adopted by vote of the town and inscribed within its records. After expressing their views as to the dangerous nature and tendency of Abolitionism, and the character of the institution located within their town "by the combined efforts and energies of Buffum, Tappan, Garrison and May,"....

"Resolved, That the Government of the United States, the Nation with all its institutions, of right belong to the white men who now possess them, they were purchased by the valor and blood of their Fathers, and must never be surrendered to any other nation or race of men.

Resolved, That our appeal to the Legislature of our own State in a case of such peculiar mischief was not only due to ourselves but to the obligations devolving upon us under the Constitution. To have been silent would have been participating in the wrongs intended. The manner that protection was afforded by the Legislature of the State is a sure guaranty that in future should the imposing attempt be repeated here, or elsewhere within our State, that attempt would be met with protection to our fellow-citizens as it has been afforded us. In the open defiance of the laws of the State, and in the abusive manner we have been assailed because we sought that protection, we see displayed the temper and motive which hitherto have characterized this organized foe of our common country.

Resolved, That the effects produced by such efforts upon the peace of the Union are exactly those which every reflecting mind must have anticipated when it beheld the spirit of oppression and imposition with which this combined force erected their standard of rebellion upon our soil; and when their counsel in a Court of Justice in their behalf declared as a matter of right that they would fix their establishment upon Canterbury in defiance of law, we saw more than ever the necessity of the appeal we had made, and now we rejoice that the appeal was not in vain."

Looking back upon this memorable episode after nearly half a century, we also can rejoice that in this as in numberless other instances "the wrath of man" so signally subserved the purposes of God and the highest interests of humanity. Miss Crandall did not succeed in teaching many colored girls but she educated the people of Windham County. Not only did every act of violence awaken corresponding sympathy but in the resultant agitation and discussion mind and conscience were enlightened. The law by which blacks were debarred from educational privileges in Connecticut, was a most powerful motor in effecting their final emancipation. The statement enforced and reiterated with so much clearness and decision that by the constitution of the United States blacks never could be citizens, awoke a spirit of inquiry and resistance that was never satisfied until an amended Constitution gave them the rights and privileges of citizenship. As the slavery question came into politics it was found that many in Windham County were opposed to its further extension. A large majority of her citizens support the Free Soil and Republican parties. Her vote gave to Connecticut many a Republican victory, and her voters were the first in the State to repudiate Judge Daggett's decision, and give to its colored inhabitants the rights and privileges of freemen. Connecticut's final verdict upon the constitutionality of the Black Law was shown by its quiet disappearance in a revision of her Statutes.

Prudence Crandall had two trials and was convicted. The case was taken to the State Supreme Court and was finally dropped because of technicalities.

The State Legislature of Connecticut in 1886 partially reimbursed her for the loss of property she suffered over the suppression of her school, by voting her a pension of $400 a year.

1522 REUBEN CRANDALL of Canterbury, Conn., son of Pardon and Esther (Carpenter) Crandall, b. 6 Jan. 1806 and d. in Jan. 1838. Reuben was also of Westchester Co. N. Y. and Virginia. He was unmarried.

Note: Life of Reuben Crandall.

Reuben Crandall, brother of Prudence Crandall, children of Pardon⁶, son of Christopher⁵, son of James⁴, son of Joseph³, son of Joseph², son of John¹, the Elder. He was born 6 Jan. 1806 and died in Jan. 1838. Both suffered persecution because of their opposition to slavery, and sympathy for the slaves.

Dr. Crandall, a graduate of Yale, and a botanist of some note, went south and located near Washington, D. C. at Georgetown in the spring of 1835 to practice medicine and to collect botanical specimens. He did not circulate this literature, although he was accused of it. After his imprisonment and trial a pamphlet was printed giving an account of his trial and acquittal.

The title of the pamphlet was: "The Trial of Reuben Crandall M. D. charged with publishing and circulating the publications of the American Anti-Slavery Society, before the Circuit Court for the District of Columbia, held at Washington, D.C.

in April 1836, occupying the court ten days."

This pamphlet is in the possession of Mrs. Samantha Farnham of Farnhamville, Iowa, a great-niece of Reuben Crandall.

There follows excerpts from this pamphlet: Reuben Crandall was arrested at Georgetown August 10, 1835 and, lay in jail nine months, awaiting his trial. Here he contracted consumption from which he died two years later.

His attorneys were Coxe and Bradley. The prosecuting attorney was Frances S. Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner". He demanded the death penalty for Reuben.

The jurors were: John H. King, Nicholas Callon, James Kennedy, Walter Clarke, George Crandall, William Waters, Thomas Hyde, Thomas Fenwick, Samuel P. Law, George Symmes, Wesley Stephenson, and Jacob Gideon, Jr. These jurors acquitted him.

On Page 34 of the pamphlet, Honorable A. T. Judson, a witness, testifies of Dr. Crandall as follows: "I have known Dr. Crandall from boyhood. I am a representative from the district in which he has lived. His father lives in the town where I live, in the immediate neighborhood. He studied with my family physician, Dr. Harris, and I have been acquainted with his reputation. No young man stood better in society. He maintained a perfectly fair reputation in all respects.

Dr. Harris stands high in his profession, a professor in Yale College and a member of the Medical Convention and educates as many students as any one in Connecticut. I forget the precise year when Crandall was admitted to the profession, but it was about 1827 or 1828. After being admitted, he left town and settled in New York."

Dr. Sewall, President of Washington Medical Society, Professor of Anatomy and Surgery in the Columbia College in the District of Columbia, testified: "Dr. Crandall called on me last summer for the purpose of obtaining a license to practice. It appeared that he had been regularly admitted, and had been in practice seven or eight years. I had considerable conversation with him, and I thought him a man of education and of uncommon intellectual powers. I think he said he had given a course of lectures on chemistry in New York and he said he thought he would deliver a course on Botany in Georgetown. In regard to obtaining a license to practice, I told him I must see his diploma, later, which was regularly and properly signed."

Honorable Judson, testifying again said: "Dr. Crandall is a brother of Prudence Crandall. In the winter of 1833, Prudence Crandall, having kept a school for young ladies, immediately changed it, at the instigation of Garrison and others, to a colored school. I had received a petition, being then a representative for the Legislature, to interfere and suppress it by law....I told him the difficulty we had with his sister; and Crandall said he would break up the school if he could, but his sister was a very obstinate girl, and that he had another sister, younger, then engaged in it, that he could, in all events, get her away.

Harry King, a young man living in Georgetown first started the trouble. He called upon Dr. Crandall and while in the room saw a pamphlet on anti-slavery lying on the table. What follows in a result of what this man started. At the trial, this is a part of his testimony.

King was again called by the court and to the question, "Did Crandall present you the paper to take away?", replied, "He did not present it to me, I asked to take it away. It might have been thrown down on the table in the confusion of unpacking, (a box and a trunk). It was a private office and was kept locked. Dr. Crandall was mostly out of doors, collecting herbs which he packed in cases. I never saw but three persons there, Dr. King, Mr. Cruikshank, and Mr. Oyster. (Mr. Oyster was the owner of the house, and who rented the room to Dr. Crandall.) There was no name over the door--nothing to indicate a doctor's shop--nothing ordinarily in a doctor's shop, except books. There was nothing in the windows or in the shop for public sale. I think he had given out, that he intended to teach botany, and suppose that was the reason Mr. Cruikshank and Dr. King were there. Dr. Crandall was describing some plants to them."

Later Mr. Oyster testified, "He, Mr. Crandall opened the box and I assisted him in taking out the things. During this time Mr. King came in and picked up a pamphlet and said he would like to have it to read. Dr. Crandall told him he might. I saw two or three of that sort, not more. When Mr. King saw it, he told him, it would not answer here; it was too far South." Another time it was testified King said, "This latitude is too far South; it won't do here." He also testified at another time that he carried the pamphlet to Linthicum's store and left it there. He did not know where it was; it was lost. Another time King testified, "I threw it on the desk in Linthicum's store and afterwards took it up and threw it on the counter; when the excitement got up I looked for it and could not find it."

They must have found this pamphlet afterwards for it is brought out that there was written on it, "READ AND CIRCULATE". They tried to prove that Dr. Crandall had written it, but could not do so, and King said that Crandall did not ask him to circulate it. They found that Dr. Crandall had a number of these pamphlets in his possession, but he was using them for pressing his botanical specimens.

The constables who arrested him were Robertson and Jeffers. They did all they could to create excitement, telling every one what they were doing, arresting Dr. Crandall and taking him to jail.

Dr. Sewall as a witness:- "I have no reason to believe that Dr. Crandall had any other object in view except to practice his profession, or to deliver lectures on botany. He left no abolition papers with me as has been reported. A great many things have been said which were not true."

They claimed they had to take precaution else Crandall would have been mobbed. They took it upon themselves to question him--as was later brought out.

The whole thing was, they were trying to prove that Dr. Crandall was circulating abolition pamphlets--incendiary literature.

One can see how easy it was to excite the people over slavery when once started by the young man King and the constables and the sympathizing prosecuting attorney, Francis S. Key.

Dr. Crandall was permitted to languish in a loathsome jail more than eight months before his trial began. This was April, 1836. He contracted tuberculosis and died in January 1838 in Cuba or Jamaica while seeking his health. There is a letter written by him in 1837 telling of his voyage to Jamaica in possession of Samantha Farnham, Farnhamville, Iowa.

Mr. Coxe, lawyer for defense of Reuben Crandall charged with publishing seditious libels.

MR. COXE'S SPEECH TO THE JURY.

I am not aware, gentlemen of the Jury, that during the whole course of my professional career, I ever advanced to the performance of a professional duty with feelings of more intense anxiety, or in the result of which I felt a deeper interest. This anxiety and this interest are not limited to the consequences which may befall the traverser, an individual as much a stranger to me as to any of you, and whom I am not that I ever saw until I met him, in your presence, in this court room. Principles have, however, been advanced, a course of procedure has been adopted in this case, which involves interest far more momentous than those which belong to any individual. Principles which may be brought to bear upon each member of this community and upon our children's children.

Gentlemen, we are engaged in the first cause of this description, which so far as my knowledge extends has ever been submitted to a court and jury in any part of these United States. It is an indictment for a seditious libel at Common Law. There was a brief period in the history of our country, when the whole nation was in a ferment, when we were threatened with foreign war and internal commotion, when party spirit raged throughout the land, and when the impression prevailed among a highly respectable portion of the community, that the circumstances of the times required extraordinary means to protect us from the impending peril. At that period, believing that the Common law afforded us adequate means of repressing seditious publications and that serious danger was to be apprehended from them, an Act of Congress was passed to meet the emergency. The Act of July 14, 1798, commonly called the Sedition Act was enacted. By the second section of which, it was, among other things provided, that if any person shall write, print, utter, or publish, etc. any false, scandalous and malicious writing against the Government of the United States and with intent to defame said government or to bring it into contempt and disrepute, or to excite against it the hatred of the good people of the United States, or to stir up sedition within the United States, such person being thereby convicted, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, and by imprisonment not exceeding two years.

This Act was the subject of as much acrimonious censure, as much obliquy, as violent deminciation as any statute which Congress ever passed. It was denounced as tyrannical in the extreme, as a violation of the Constitution, as a fatal blow delt at the freedom of discussion and the liberty of the press. That statute no longer exists. During the brief period of its existance, there were some few instances in which it was enforced by prosecutions against obnoxious individuals, But excepting during that short time, and these few cases, no other prosecutions for seintious libels have been instituted within my knowledge.

This is a wholly different case. This is an attempt to apply the general well known principles of the common law to this accomplishment of the same end. It is not only a novelty among us, but it is not familiar to the Courts of England.

In this case then, we have all high and important duties to perform. Great principles are to be settled end upon its result depend consequences which it is impracticable fully to anticipate. I do not profess to be a prophet or the son of a prophet; but without err ogating to myself any extraordinary powers of pricience, I can venture to predict, that if the doctrines you have hear promulgated on behalf of the prosecution, if the proceedints which you have heard, were advised by the District Attorney, and have been justified here by him, shall be recognized as lawful, seeds will have been sown, which will rapidly vegetate and produce a most abundant harvest.

When such doctrines are to be discussed, pregnant with such serious and durable fruits, I cannot but feel that a deep responsibility has developed upon us all; and I feel how large a portion of it falls to my share in performing the duty upon which I have entered, of vindicating against them the principles of liberty and of the constitution in which I have been matured, and in which I have thus far lived.

If, Gentlemen, upon such a warrant as you have seen was issued against this traverser, based upon such grounds as it alleged, any individual in this community may be arrested, his papers seized and examined, his most confidential correspondence exposed to the public gaze, and this believed to be warranted by the law by which we are governed, then, I say, this District is no place for me. Unless my feet be staid by a similar process--if the power of locomotion be allowed me, I would seek some refuge where I should be safe from such horrible outrages. If upon evidence thus rested from my possession I shall be indictable, without any overt act, for sedition and subjected, as this traverser has been, to an incarceration for eight months, preparatory to trial, and then denounced before the community in the unmeasured terms you have applied to him, and to be told that for such an offense as having in my private custody, under my own lock and key, publications such as he had, or for loaning one to an intelligent friend for his single perusal, I shall encounter such consequences, then to escape such tyranny would I fly to the remotest parts of this once free land.

Gentlemen, this is not, and cannot be the law of this District. What is the case? What was the case, when this prosecution was commenced, and this process issued? Carry back your minds to the tenth of August last, when this warrant was placed by the Justice, acting under the advice of the District Attorney, in the hands of the constables who served it. At that time, the only fact which has been given in evidence, and which has served as the foundation for this whol prosecution, was simply this: that Mr. King coming into the office of the traverser, whom he frequently visited, and with whom he frequently conversed, perceived three pamphlets among a great variety of other publications of different sorts and appearances, lying upon a table, just taken from a box where surgical instruments, books, and botanical collections had been packed, and these papers employed for the purpose of packing them. Taking up one of these pamphlets, noticing its title page, and making an observation that this was too far south for things of that sedscription, he asked permission of the traverser to read it. This request was acceded to, up to the tenth of August, this was the only act in proof against Dr. Crandall. His offense "had this extent--no more"

The affidavit which is set out in the warrant does not go even to this length in any positive averment. William Robinson who made that affidavit, deposes, that he has seen in Georgetown a pamphlet of an incendiary character bearing upon it the name of Dr. Crandall, and that he has been informed and believes that Dr. Crandall is distributing and is circulating that pamphlet. The only positive averment connecting the traverser with the publication in question is at least unimportant; and if important, will, I presume, now be admitted to be untrue. Mr. Robinson on the stand as a witness, has no recollection of it, not has any other witness who has been examined; and if it be true in fact, as we have every reason to believe, and are fully persuaded, and as Mr. Bradly has, I think shown cleerly from the evidence, that the very pamphlet thus loaned to King is one of those now in evidence before you, it is beyond all question that no such endorsement appeared upon it. As to the information to which this deponent yielded his credence, that Dr. Crandall was engaged in the circulation and distribution of this pamphlet, it is equally unfortified by any of the evidence before you. If Mr. Robinson was so informed, he was shamefully imposed upon. I wish he would expose the man by whom he has thus been misled. Mr. King and Mr. Oyster were the only individuals personally cognisnt of the only circumstances which had occurred, and it cannot be credited, and it has not been surmised that either of them was the fabricator of this untruth.

Upon this foundation, flimsy as it is, the learned justice, acting under the counsel and advice of the learned District Attorney, issued the illegal and unconstitutional warrant which I hold in my hand. By this precept the constables were enjoined to search and examine the papers of the traverser, to select such as they might sudge to be of incendiary character, and to bring them together with the person of the traverser before some Justice of the Peace to be dealt with according to law.

This process thus illegally issued, thus illegally executed, has been justified by the District Attorney. He avows his participation in it, and avows himself ready, whenever required, to prove that it is lawful. On the other hand, I pledge myself on all occasions and whenever the question shall be presented for judicial decision, to brand it as tyrannical, oppressive, illegal and unconstitutional. The arguments upon this subject need not be again repeated. The fact of its occurrence will, however, it is hoped, induce Congress to do what the House of Commons did, when the same case was presented in England, solemnly to denounce it as oppressive and illegal.

The papers, or some of them thus found, thus wrested from the traverser, furnish the next evidence upon which the prosecutor rests his case. About a dozen pamphlets, similar to those supposed to be alluded to in the first and second counts of the indictment, and one alleged to be one of the twelve indicted in the third count, are among those stolen goods. The fact of their being found is the evidence of the publication by the traverser. Here again I enter my protest against the doctrines promulgated to sanction this prosecution. The head and front of the offense is not an actual circulation or distribution, or even a handing to a single individual, of the papers included in the second and third counts. It is the single fact that, in the execution of this illegal warrant, they were found in this possession. If this be criminal, where is the man in this community, who is not equally amenable to prosecution? The only overt act is that, at the solicitation of a friend, the traverser permitted him to take a single copy of one pamphlet to read--the only evidence to commit him with the others is, that they were found by the constables in his possession. Can this be such a publication as the law condemns? I answer unhesitatingly, "No". Two things must conspire to bring the traverser within the range of the law, if indeed there be any law to meet the case. The publications themselves must be of such a character as befit means of accomplishing the ends charged. They must be circulated, if seen, to engender insurrection among the blacks, contempt of government among the whites. The mode and manner of the publication by the traverser must be such as to justify the conclusion that such was his design and object. If the prosecutor fail in the proof of either of these facts the traverser is entitled to a verdict of acquittal.

Can it then be pretended that there is any proof of any such publication by him? Admitting, for the sake of argument, that the character of these pamphlets is as incendiary and as injurious as it may suit the District Attorney to represent them, has he brought home to him any malicious, any injurious dissemination of them? Can the loan to Mr. King be considered as of that character?

The District Attorney in his last speech, has according to my judgment, and my understanding of his views, made such admissions upon this part of the case as to be equivalent to an absolute surrender of the cause. He has conceded, that the mere fact of having given a copy of these publications to an individual may be innocent. He has conceded, that the traverser, without violating any law, without incurring any criminality or censure might have placed a dozen of them in the hands of a dozen different individuals. Upon what ground, then, can he hope to sustain the prosecution? A most dangerous, a most false, a most indefensible one. Had he placed them in the hands of elderly, sober, discreet citizens of the district, not liable to be poisoned by their paroxysmic influence, all would have been right; the witness, Mr. King is conceded to be within all these categories excepting one--he was not an elderly man. He is represented and conceded to be intelligent, discreet, having no abolition sympathies, and an established residence among us. The only disqualification then was his age. The District Attorney was compelled to yield what he did, because under the eye of the court, under your eye, during the whole progress of this trial, he has exposed these incendiary publications to the examination, and permitted them to be read by various individuals in this room. If the traverser was wrong, Mr. Key can not be right. If yielding a hesitating and reluctant assent to the request of the witness, is to subject one to imprisonment in the loathsome jail in this county, for the period it has been endured by the defendant, to indicate, and to such a prosecution as we have witnessed. I ask, how is Mr. Key to expect to escape a similar fate for what he has done? Has he even secured himself by the age of those to whom he has published. No; among the numerous individuals who have thus been permitted to read and inhale this dangerous poison under our immediate view there have been both old and young. His own sons are of the number. Are they not equally young with Mr. King? Are they not equally warm in their feelings and excitable in their temperaments.

But another ground has been more than insinuated. It seems that the traverser is a northern man, a native of Connecticut and that he came here through New York. And have we lived to see the day, when in a court of justice, sitting in the District of Columbia, under the very eye of Congress it shall be urged against an individual arraigned at the criminal bar, either as a ground for suspicion, or as a circumstance of aggravation, that the party comes from the north or from the south, from the east or from the west? But we have been told on the part of the prosecution that the northern men are interlopers among us; intruders, who have no sympathies. For one, I enter my protest against such language. It is bad enough to resort to such topics to rouse the local prejudices of men in scenes of political strife. I had hoped courts of justice would ever remain closed against such appeals. Gentlemen of the jury, more particularly does it behoove us to avoid such grounds, either of argument or inflammation. There are doubtless vile fanatics, or men, who under the guise of purity and honest zeal, in the north, are ready to scatter fire brands among us; men who scruple to use no means to accomplish the most nefarious ends; men, who professing love and sympathy with the whole human family, would prosecute designs and employ means which threaten to involve the south in all the accumulated horror of a servile war. These men are few in number and possess little or no dangerous influence. On the other hand there are men in the south, who knowing the weakness and inconsiderable numbers of these northern friends, exult at every manifestation of this disgraceful spirit, and with motives no purer than those against which they inveigh, are in truth their most active and efficient auxiliaries. If there are fanatics in the north, are there not also incendiaries to the south? If the one scatters the sparks of discord, do not the other industriously fenn them into a flame?

With neither of this description of people have I any sympathy. With neither of them does this district possess any common interest. If they are determined upon war; if they are bent upon their monstrous objects, let them contend elsewhere. As a citizen of this District I protest against their making this place the scene of their contentions. With my consent our fair fields shall never be converted into an aceldama by these contending factions. Still less, can I consent that our halls of justice shall be made the scenes of their unhallowed warfare, and ourselves the ministers of their passions. It is for you, gentlemen, now to resist these first attempts to introduce disorganization and disorder into these hitherto unpolluted places.

But is it true that there ere no common sympathies between the north and the south, and that the citizens of the northern states are to be denounced as aliens and enemies? Gentlemen, no such feeling existed during the critical periods of our history when it is a matter of honorable contest who first set in motion the ball of the revolution. No such feeling pervaded any section of our land, when at the commencement of that revolution, the father of his country, then known only as a Virginian, assumed the command of our first army before beleaguered Boston, and caused the evacuation by a foreign foe of that cradle of American liberty. No feeling existed when the Northern Greene, second only to Washington, in that momentous struggle, leading on the gallant chivalry of the south, first turned back the tide of victory upon Cornwallis. No such feeling will, it is hoped, exist, when the measures for our own especial relief now pending before Congress shall be brought up for final decision in the House of Representatives. Of all men throughout this land, we should be the last to feel, to foment, to give countenance to such doctrines.

But, we are told of the excitement which pervaded this District, gentlemen, I shall demonstrate from the evidence that, in producing this excitement the unfortunate traverser had not part. He was not the cause, not even innocently, of what occurred. What was the character of that excitement? Was it of that description which judging from the language of this indictment and the tone of this prosecution would be supposed? Was there any insurrection existing, threatened, or apprehended, among our slaves? Any among our free negroes? Has there been an hour when any alarm pervaded us from either of these classes? None that I ever knew; none that I ever heard of. Not a night has passed over our heads, in which we could not lay our heads upon our pillows with a sense of the most perfect security from all such dangers.

True it is, there was excitement; but of a totally different character pervading a totally different portion of our people. An excitement, of which, from the evidence, I shall show you the origin and show you the author. It was such an excitement as that which originated this prosecution, which finds in its prosecution its food and aliment.

Go back with me again to the famous tenth of August, when this traverser was arrested upon this charge. Up to the evening of that day, not a sympton or trace of excitement appears from the testimony. On the evening of that day it first began to exhibit itself. It was an excitement got up against Dr. Crandall, not by him.

When three constables went to his lodgings, or his office to execute the most illegal and tyrannical warrant with which they had been entrusted, all was calm and quiet. But for them it might and would have remained so. They made public, in the streets of Georgetown, the motive and object of their visit, and a few individuals assembled with a natural curiosity to learn the result. What was then the course of Jeffers? Leaving the office of traverser, he goes to Dr. Linthicum's shop, and there proclaims to the persons who had assembled, that "their hopes were more than realized". Had he stopped there, all might have been well, knowing that something more than accusation is necessary to constitute guilt; knowing that our law presumes every man innocent till criminality is established; that it is or ought to be the wish of every individual, that the accused should be able to establish his innocence, these words alone might have been well understood in the only sense in which truth would have warranted their expression; in the only sense in which any man connected however humbly with the administration of justice, could with propriety, have uttered them, as an assertion of the innocence, thus far, of the traverser; but the constable added, they have found a large quantity of incendiary publications in his possessions; as many as a hundred and fifty or a hundred and sixty.

Then came the excitement; a cry was at once heard, "Carry him across the street and hang him to the tree!" Such, gentlemen was the origin, such was the author and such the character of the excitement which pervaded our community. And who can, who dare in the face of this evidence and the truth, to implicate the traverser in any degree with it? Shall he now be made the victim through the forms of law, of that excitement against which he could, in this district, find no other refuge than a jail? Is he now to be drawn from that loathsome refuge, to be immolated as a victim on this altar?

To return, gentlemen to the more immediate merits of this case. The testimony is silent as to any act of publication by the traverser of more than one of the publications which are referred to in this indictment, or have been the subject of comment by the prosecutor.

In what part of his conduct do you perceive any trace of improper motive or of improper design. We are told, however, that he could not have been in possession of them as he was, with any other than criminal designs. We are thus brought to the consideration of this part of the case.

Gentlemen, is it to be endured, that under color of law, in the face of all law, and in the very teeth of the constitution a warrant shall be issued under which the papers of an individual shall be searched and examined; and that papers thus wrenched from his most private custody, shall be produced as proof of his crime? Still more monstrous is it that these shall be held evidence of a malicious and seditious publication of such papers.

In every prosecution for a libel, it is incumbent on the prosecutor to establish the fact of a malicious publication. In cases where libels are calculated injuriously to affect an individual, such malice may be inferred from a single act of publication to a single individual. The law does not measure the extent of the injury; its duty is fulfilled when it ascertains existence to any degree. But in cases of seditious publications, of libels which are injurious, and can only be injurious by the application of the exciting spark to the inflammable material it is, according to my comprehension of the law, essential that the publication, to be criminal, should be made to such persons as could or might be injured. This case, is then, destitute of such proof, and in its absence the traverser is entitled to your verdict.

As to the criminal intent inferable from the naked fact that the papers in question were in his possession, it would have been sufficient to answer, that had he originally obtained and preserved, and subsequently brought them to this district, with intent to publish and disseminate them, until such illegal dissemination be proved, the crime consists wholly in insertion. It is unnecessary for me to remind you of the principle which pervades our whole criminal code, that a criminal intent must be combined with an illegal act to constitute legal guilt.

But slender as is such a foundation for any criminal prosecution, I am not disposed to concede that even such exists. The evidence in the case shows that the papers found in the office of Dr. Crandall were in his possession, or in that of the family in which he resided at Peekskill, two years before came to this district, that they were used by him merely to preserve his botanical specimens; that they were an inconsiderable portion, as to numbers, of a mass of papers; that they were placed by a lady who has testified before you at her own suggestion, in the box from which they were taken in Georgetown in the presence of other witnesses, without any view on the part of either to bring them into this district; that they were used only as packing papers and drying papers. (Mr. Cox here went into a minute examination of the evidence to illustrate each of these points.) As to the package found in his trunk, it is also in evidence that they were placed in his hands in New York in June by a person from whom he had purchased a book; that he had no knowledge of their contents; that the package remained unopened in his trunk till the witness, who has detailed the transaction herself, opened it: that it remained undiminished up to the period of his arrest. (Mr. Cox examined the evidence here in detail to establish these grounds.*)

It is gentlemen, from such evidence as this, that you are asked to infer that the apparently innocent act of yielding to Mr. King's request, that he might be permitted to read one of these publications, was fraught with evil, and indicated the most criminal and atrocious designs. No mischief has been accomplished--no insurrection has been raised--no human being except the unhappy traverser himself has been injured; but from such circumstances, you are to presume guilty designs; and although evidenced by no one overt act--though never accomplished, or attempted to be accomplished--you are to find the accused to be in fact guilty.

It is, gentlemen, preposterous--it is monstrous. It has no foundation in any principle of law--it can find no support in any dictate of reason. It is a reproach to our community. It is a slander upon our institutions, that an intelligent and highly accomplished individual, should, under such circumstances and upon such grounds, have suffered what has already been inflicted upon him. True, he is a stranger. But among the brightest, and most attractive characteristics of the South, has hitherto been her generous hospitality. Thousands of southern men have partaken of the liberal hospitality of the North. If this be the mode in which it is to be reciprocated--if stranger and enemy are to be with us convertible terms--if to come from the North be evidence of guilt, or even cause of suspicion, all the kindness which many of us have witnessed, must be at an end upon our heads must rest the consequences.

Gentlemen, from the review of the testimony can a question exist as to the entire freedom from guilt of every act which has been proved upon the traverser? He came into the possession of the paper innocently; they were never distributed by him.

Again, you have been told that the character of the publications themselves carries with it the strongest evidence of a malicious and seditious intent. I cannot concur in the principle in law as thus assumed. Had the testimony shown the distribution of incendiary pamphlets among our negroes, or among that portion of the community likely to be prejudicially affected by them; had they been industrially disseminated by the traverser, a character might have been given to such acts by showing the nature of the papers published. But the whole publication pretended here is merely an inferential one--in point of fact--none actually occurred. It is an inferred fact, not an existing one which is then characterized. It is not an overt act to which you are to assign a motive; you are to presume both fact and purpose.

But had the fact of a general, a wide, an indiscriminate distribution been positively established by direct proof, it would remain incumbent upon the prosecutor to show from the tendency and nature of the publications themselves, that the ends which he attributes to the traverser, were really his, and that the character of the papers thus disseminated is such as to warrant inference of illegal motives and criminal intent.

This is not the stage of the cause, in which we can with propriety argue the question whether there be any libellous matter set forth in the indictment or any violation of any criminal law charged in the indictment. It may, perhaps, become necessary to discuss that hereafter. At present, I shall examine it purely as a question of fact for the jury. Unless I am much deceived, I shall establish beyond all doubt the position that in the quotations from the publications which are incorporated into the indictment there is nothing from which a criminal intent or motive can be inferred.

In examining this point of the case, I must request your particular attention to the extracts from the papers which are charged to be libellous as they are spread upon the record. If there be no criminal matter there, there is no crime charged. In reference to this, I undertake to show, that there is not one sentiment, or one expression bearing upon the subject of slavery. Or upon slave-holders, describing the conditions of the slaves denunciatory of the system, pointing out its fruits or foretelling its results, which I shall not show you to have been uttered by slave-holders, by the statesmen and the legislators, the divines, the lawyers, and philosophers of the South. I shall compare passage by passage, place them in juxtaposition before you and call upon you to tax your utmost powers of discrimination to distinguish between them. I shall select these passages, not only exclusively from southern men, but from southern men possessing and deserving the highest consideration. I shall quote language which has not been uttered carelessly and incautiously, but that which has been deliberately promulgated in legislative halls, in philosophical treatises, in the most grave deliberative bodies.

Gentlemen, let me not be understood, I am not about to justify one libel by quoting another, I mean not to vindicate the authors or the publishers of the alleged libels, by showing that others have employed language equally offensive, and equally obnoxious to punishment. My object is to show that it cannot possibly be criminal, even for a northern man to express himself upon this subject in the same language which we daily hear and daily read among ourselves. I shall quote from public speeches made by the District Attorney himself, in large and promiscuous assemblies of people of all ages, of both sexes, and from all quarters of our land. From speeches delivered by his friends and associates at such meetings, and published under the direction and supervision of the Board of Managers of Colonization Society, of whom he is one, and has been one for years.

(Mr. Cox here proceeded minutely to compare the language alleged in the indictment to be libelous with analogous passages from the speeches of Mr. Key, Mr. Archer, Mr. Curtis, Bishop Smith, General Harper, and others at meetings at the Colonization Society. Of Patrick Henry in the Virginia Convention, of Mr. Pinkney in the Legislature of Maryland, from Mr. Jefferson's notes on Virginia, from Tucker's Blackstone, and other publications, pointing out the identity of sentiment, and almost of express between them.)

Gentlemen, neither you nor I, nor even the District Attorney can distinguish the language of one of these parties from the other, for no distinction exists. If any can be found, it will consist merely in this--that the northern gentlemen are somewhat less fervid in their eloquence, somewhat more temperate in their use of epithets, somewhat less denunciatory than their southern friends. Where the one is deserving of praise, the other cannot be the subject of just censure.

What then, has given birth to this proceeding? Why, gentlemen, a controversy has grown up between the two rival societies, the Colonization and the Abolition Society. They bother to profess a warm interest in the welfare of the blacks; both denounce the system of slaves as a great moral evil. they concur in thinking it ought to be eradicated from our political system;--but they differ somewhat as to the means by which these objects shall be accomplished, they disagree as to the rapidity with which the goal shall be reached. One accuses the other of being too rapid, and is itself charged in turn with being too languid. With the respective merits or demerits of these societies we have at present, no concern. Whether both be right, or both wrong, or the one right and the other wrong, is not a matter in issue upon this trial.

The highly estimable Secretary of the Colonization Society has eulogized in terms of high and probably just praise, the personal excellence, the sincerity, the religious zeal of the abolitionists. Mr. Garritt Smith speaks of them as his highly valued friends. But their controversies are becoming embittered; and I trust you will feel disposed, as I am, to allow them to settle them as they please, without our interference.

The District Attorney has denounced the Abolition Society in terms similar to those which the Abolitionists apply to the slave-holders. In this, he deviates somewhat from the language of his colonization friends. But he asserts that the traverser is a member of the American Abolition Society. This assertion is like many others of the prosecutor, wholly gratuitous.

It is not sustained by the evidence, nor has it any foundation in fact, one of the constables, it is true, has stated that during that exciting evening of Dr. Crandall's arrest, he admitted he was a member of that society. But this is disproved by all the other testimony in the case; and the District Attorney well knows, that the only positive evidence, upon this subject, which could be produced, has been exhibited to him, wholly disproving this assertion.

Gentlemen, I have no disposition to defend the Abolition Society. I know nothing of it and care as little. But from one of the works on the table, I will read one or two articles of its constitution, which professes to state the objects at which it aims and the means by which those objects are to be accomplished. (Mr. Cox here read from Judge Jay's work two clauses of the constitution of the Society.) If this be a correct exhibition of the principles of the society, there is but a small difference between them and their colonization friends.

After the labors we have all endured in this case, gentlemen, you must participate with me in the fatigue which is necessarily the result. In the observations I have submitted to you, I have endeavored to avoid going over the same ground which had already occupied with so much ability by my friend and associate. Much yet remains to be said but your patience and my strength are both well nigh exhausted.

In conclusion, I will remark that if the smallest portion of practical injury shall result from the visit of the traverser to this place it cannot be attributive to him. He was pursuing peaceably and quietly the even tenor of his way; his mind occupied in professional pursuits; and his time occuplied in professional pursuits; and his time devoted to innocent and scientific objects. Not a single individual every hear from his lips, a word having the remotest tendency to disturb the peace of the community, or to outrage the feelings of a single citizen. His books and papers were harmlessly reposing in his trunk and in his office, neither injuring nor calculated to injure any one. From this quiet repose, both have been snatched by the lawless violence, which has characterized the proceedings against him; language imputed to him which he never uttered, and bruited forth to rouse into action and stimulate to deeds of ferocity, a ruthless mob.

These publications which have been denounced as so inflammatory that to allow Mr. King to read one of them is held up as conclusive evidence of the most heinous guilt, have been publicly exhibited by the prosecutor and read with all the rich pathos of his eloquence, to the large and promiscuous assemblage which has witnessed this trial, and laid open to the inspection from day to day of all who might choose to gratify their curiosity by a perusal of them. If the danger apprehended, be real, what consequences may not be anticipated from the dissemination of this dreadful poison! What scenes of insurrection and of tumult may not be acted among us! But upon whom must the fearful responsibility rest? Not upon the innocent man who has never breathed them to the world, but upon the prosecutor himself who has preached them to this excited and excitable community and who has darkened even the gloomiest horrors which his fancy could imagine by the eloquent language in which he has clothed them.

Returning you my thanks and those of my client for the patient attention to his case, I submit him and his fate with entire confidence into your hands."

Mr. Francis S. Key, prosecuting attorney, made a closing speech. The jury retired, and after a deliberation of about one hour, agreed upon a verdict of NOT GUILTY; and the next morning Dr. Crandall was discharged.

A PART OF THE PROSECUTING ATTORNEY, FRANCIS S. KEY'S SPEECH.

Mr. Key replied to the observations of the counsel for the defense in relation to the testimony of Mr. Jeffers, who with the other officer, he said, had taken proper measures to shield the prisoner from injury that might accrue from an excited people; and contented that his conduct and testimony was fair and correct throughout. After some remarks, respecting the conversations with Colclaitz er, and that heard by Tippet, he concluded by saying that if the jury thought the publications were not libellous, and had no tendency to incite insurrection. If they thought men could be allowed to come here and circulate such papers, then there was an end to all protection for the lives and property of the people of the South.

One of the gentlemen says that there is no danger here; that we stand on middle ground; that there will be no excitement or insurrection here. Then he differs from Crandall, for he has said the excitement was too great already. And everyone knows there has been danger and excitement. But if there is none here, have we no sympathies for those differently situated who are more critically exposed than we are to the horrible results of these abolition operations! We thought such sympathies existed; and this was a proper occasion for their exercise. We had only to say, that if the jury had conscientious convictions of the prisoner's innocence, they should acquit him. We thought he conclusively demonstrated the opposite opinion.

RESULT:

As said before, the jury retired and after a deliberation of about one hour, agreed upon a verdict of NOT GUILTY; and the next morning Dr. Crandall was discharged.

. Note: Baby Carriages, Typewriter and Infant Spoon: Next month there will gather in this city representatives of the largest family of inventors in the world; It is the Crandall family, or because the family has four thousand branches it was deemed proper to name it the Crandall Genealogical Association.

Benjamin Potter Crandall, whose likeness appears on this page, was the pioneer baby carriage manufacturer and inventor in this country. It was on stone, which is now Madison Street, that he fashioned the awkward perambulator which is reproduced on this page. That was in 1841. Benjamin had tired of the rude boxes with four spokeless wheels and a lath for a tongue that parents used for trundling their infants about the Isle of Manhattan. The result of his discontent was the slight improvement shown in the cut of the first baby carriage manufactured in America.

The evolution from the first baby carriage to the latest invention of one of his sons, William A. Crandall, is interesting. The first had but two wheels and was made of basswood, with an imitation hub extending only a short distance beneath the wagon which had no axle. The first baby carriage cost one and a half dollars. Now they cost anywhere from $18 to $75.

This grew in course of time and by the grace of patents into a brave affair, with oscillating axle, four wheels and a green gingham cover edged with cotton fringe. And from this has been evolved the lace-canopied, wicker-bodied luxury that is the pride of the mammas of to-day.

It was Benjamin Potter Crandall to whom posterity owes the debt of the Americanized hobby horse. From a rude wooden model sent him from Germany in 1845, he cut away the rough sides to the semblance of legs, fastened these upon a bent rocker of light wood and thus evolved the "cricket". Then came the "thug", which was like the "cricket", except that it had a mane and tail of real, instead of painted, hair and a stuffed leather body. The fourth step in this upward trend of the hobby horse was an imitation of a big saddle. The horse was painted, and again he became a wooden animal. It was only the imported ones that were stuffed at that time.

Then came the housewives complaining that the rockers cut the carpet, and Jesse A. Crandall, the son of Benjamin, improved upon the father's hobby horse, as William had improved upon the baby carriage. He invented the spring horse, which pirouetted valiantly on its hind feet upon the curled spring of a platform. It was of this spring horse that Nathaniel Willis wrote "Health and Happiness on Horseback." One one of the Crandall spring horses, Joseph Jefferson was drawn across the stage in a burlesque of "Mazeppa" at the Winter Garden in 1858, an occasion that the veteran actor recalls with boyish laughter. From the spring horse, sprang the oscillating horse, the leaping horse, the board-side rocker, the shoe fly horse, and the trotters-in-a-sulky.

The earliest American velocipede, also manufactured by Benjamin Crandall, was as crude an adaption in its way as the first American baby carriage. It was a rough three-wheeled velocipede, cumbersome and unwieldy. Parented by it there came into the children's world the three-wheeled propeller. With a wooden horse's head, then followed the four-wheeled propeller, from which was evolved three three-wheeled velocipede, and then the American trotting horse in wood.

Jesse A. Crandall, one of three surviving sons has 127 patents to his credit. He has been called the child's benefactor because he has invented and improved so many toys. The latest invention of this family of inventors is a spoon for eating corn and the claim is made that it solves the intensely interesting American problem of how to eat corn off the cob, with neatness and despatch. The spoon has an opening near the handle and extending from this are a half dozen pointed silver teeth that push the corn into the bowl of the spoon. The rest is left to the discretion of the diner.

Lucian Stephen Crandall, the president of the recently organized Crandall Genealogical Association, is the inventor of the typewriter. The first typewriter girl is a grandmother and lived in Philadelphia. John Courtland Crandall of 495 Cortlandt Ave. New York, N.Y., the originator of the Association has invented several vehicles. The Crandalls have relatives who perished in the massacre of St. Bartholomew. The pioneer Crandall in America was one John, who was a Seventh Day Baptist.

We, your friends and co-workers in farm co-operation, extend our heartiest appreciation for the outstanding achievements you have made in livestock breeding, the victories you have won by championing the farmers' cause in state and national legislation, your many successes in farm organization, and your signal triumph in co-operative marketing achieved through your sound counsel and sincere guidance of the Central Co-Operative Association through its critical inception to its present permanency, when, at this twenty-first annual convention it is recognized nationally as the largest individual livestock marketing agency of America.

In token of our high esteem for your untiring service to agriculture, we present this portrait of you, painted by the internationally famous artist, Carl Bohnen, to the organization of which you have been President continuously since it was founded.

M. (Vosburgh) Beecher.

Note: The following record is taken from Genealogist's Corner, Chatham Currier, date 18 Sept. 1941, Columbia County Biographies, compiled in 1894.

William M. Crandall, Postmaster and a dealer in general merchandise at Columbiaville, in the town of Stockport, Columbia Co. N.Y. was b. in Chesterville, Albany Co. on 8 June, 1844. William is a man in the prime of life whose years have been passed in active business, the larger number of them in Columbia Co. During this period, he has won for himself by his conscientiousness and upright methods of dealing, the respect and confidence of his fellow men.

Peter Crandall, the grandfather of the above named, spent his entire life in the town of Westerloo, Albany Co. N.Y., being an esteemed member of the farming community of that place. He married Margaret Tripp who was also a native of Westerloo. James Crandall, son of Peter and Margaret, was born in the homestead of his parents in the town of Westerloo and there spent his boyhood youth and the earlier years of his manhood. When quite young, he learned the trade of a shoemaker. Following that occupation for a while, he next became a farmer. He was successful in this venture, but desirous of still further improving his condition, James entered the tannery business in Chesterville, remaining there several years. Subsequently, he became again interested in agricultural pursuits and for many years was thus engaged, also working at the trade which he had learned in earlier years, a good shoemaker always being in demand. He spent a long and useful life, dying in 1892 in the town of Stuyvesant Falls. His wife, whose maiden name was Electa Lobdell, a native of Westerloo, preceded him to the better land, dying in 1867. They were the parents of five children, namely: Margaret, Henry, Edwin, William M. and George S.

William M., the subject of this sketch received the rudiments of his education in the district school of his native town; he was an energetic youth, full of ambition and when fifteen years of age, entered the store of Abram A. Van Alen of Stuyvesant Falls as a clerk. He performed his duties with fidelity, showing marked aptitude for the business and four years later he became a partner of Charles Sampson, also a clerk for Mr. Van Alen. Together, they continued in business for thirteen years. William then sold out his interest at Stuyvesant Falls and established himself in the mercantile trade in Columbiaville and has since been an important factor in the business community. He is public-spirited and progressive, working for the town's advancement. He was largely instrumental in the establishment of a Postoffice at Columbiaville where he received his appointment as Postmaster in 1888, an office whose duties he is still performing to the satisfaction of the community.

In politics, William is a staunch supporter of the principles promulgated by the Democratic Party.
